Wide Speculation On Peace Effort

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Saigon tonight and Le Duc Tho, his North Vietnamese adversary in secret peace talks, flew to Hanoi amid widespread speculation about a new move to end the war.

There was no official confirmation of the new peace move, and Tho contended there was no basis for it. But some diplomats in Washington and Paris surmised that Kissinger, who met with Tho in Paris Monday, would try to persuade President Nguyen Van Thieu to agree to a compromise formula approaching the enemy's demand that Thieu step down.

Others suggested that Kissinger and Tho would report a deadlock in their secret Paris sessions, with Kissinger reassuring the uneasy Thieu that President Nixon will not let him down.

There also had been speculation in Saigon that Kissinger might fly on to Hanoi after ending his visit here Friday. But informed sources said Kissinger would fly from here to Tokyo Friday en route back to Washington.

He will stop in Tokyo to make final plans for the forthcoming summit conference between Nixon and Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka scheduled for Honolulu at the end of this month, sources said. Plans call for him to leave Tokyo on Saturday.

Tho, leaving Paris today, told newsmen he wanted to emphasize that his trip was "a routine one and has no other meaning. ... is in the framework of my usual comings and goings." Tho, a member of North Vietnam's Politburo, said the speculation about his trip "in general ... does not correspond to reality" and "could lead to inexact conclusions."

At the White House, Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler made this bare-bones announcement:

Kissinger, who met Tho in Paris Monday, will confer with Thieu and others in Saigon until late Friday. He will report back to Nixon before the Republican National Convention opens in Miami Beach next Monday.

Ziegler said Kissinger's two days in Saigon will include "a general review of all aspects of the Vietnam problem, including the negotiations in Paris."

He cautioned against speculating about a breakthrough in the Paris talks. He said the trip had been under consideration for several weeks.

Meanwhile, sources in Saigon disclosed today that Nixon has ordered another round of U.S. troop withdrawals beginning after Sept. 1, when the level is expected to be down to 39,000 men.

Ham Breakfast Planned

The annual Old Missouri Country Cured Ham and Bacon Breakfast and auction — always a highlight of the Missouri State Fair — will break with tradition this year.

The yearly event will be held at the Picnic Pavilion on the Camp Grounds, west of Clarendon Road, at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday — the first time the breakfast and sale have been held on the fairgrounds.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will lead a long line of state officials, congressmen, senators and state legislators who will attend.

The primary purpose of the breakfast is to promote and give recognition to one of Missouri's fine products and the people who produce them, according to Chuck Lawrence, executive manager of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce.

During the breakfast, the producers of the grand champion ham, the reserve champion ham and the bacon champion are announced and given awards. The auction follows.

This year, as in the past, a leading entertainer will perform for those attending. Myron Floren, accordionist from the Lawrence Welk Show, is this year's featured entertainer.

Tickets for the event may be secured by writing the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, Lawrence said.

Bombs Strike North

Air War Action on Increase

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. planes made their deepest and heaviest strikes in North Vietnam in a week Tuesday, renewed their attack on the northwest rail line to China and shot down one of three MIG21s that tried to intercept them, the U.S. Command announced today.

It was the 159th MIG reported downed by U.S. crews in the war and the 48th this year.

The U.S. Command said Air Force, Navy and Marine fighter-bombers flew more than 290 strikes against targets in North Vietnam. U.S. pilots had been averaging less than 200 a day in the north since Aug. 8 because of heavy clouds, but the weather improved Tuesday.

Air Force F4 Phantom pilots made several direct hits with laser bombs on the 75-foot Phu Tho railroad bridge 45 miles northwest of Hanoi, the Air Force said. The bridge had been attacked before but had been repaired.

Other planes attacked the Viet Tri thermal power plant 30 miles northwest of Hanoi.

Capt. Fred W. Sheffler, 29, of Akron, Ohio, and Capt. Mark A. Massen, 25, of Downey, Calif., flying an Air Force Phantom jet, were credited with downing the MIG21 about 25 miles northwest of Hanoi. They hit it with a missile.

North Vietnam claimed that five U.S. jets were shot down during daylight raids Tuesday and two more during midnight strikes. The only losses announced by the U.S. Command were an F4 Phantom shot down Sunday in the northern half of the demilitarized zone and a helicopter gunship downed Tuesday below the DMZ, south of Quang Tri City.

The two phantom crewmen are listed as missing. One American aboard the AH1 Cobra gunship was reported killed and one wounded.

Clark: Bombings Chain POWs

Ramsey Clark ...
... holding antipersonnel bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark said today the continued U.S. bombing of North Vietnam will insure that American prisoners of war will not be released.

Clark who recently returned from a two-week trip to North Vietnam said, "My impression is the chances of their releasing American pilots while there is American bombing is nil except as a symbolic thing."

He added that North Vietnamese leaders with whom he spoke appeared surprised when asked if they would release the prisoners after the war is ended. Their surprise seemed to say what reason would they have for keeping them, Clark said.

Appearing before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee exploring the problem of war refugees throughout Indochina, Clark also described destruction of dikes and sluices, schools, hospitals and civilian areas.

At the White House, presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler was asked in connection with Clark's testimony whether the United States has a policy regarding the use of antipersonnel mines.

The presidential spokesman responded tartly, "I'm not going to be responsive to any questions regarding that man." He said questions regarding U.S. ordnance can be addressed to the Defense Department.

The Pentagon has acknowledged on several occasions the use of antipersonnel weapons, including metal cluster bombs, against antiaircraft gun crews as part of the effort to knock out the weapons.

It has denied using any plastic projectiles which some antiwar spokesmen claim have been exploded in North Vietnam. According to these critics, the plastic is a particularly brutal weapon because, they say, it makes wounds more difficult to treat.

He conceded he is not a military man but said the damage to dikes and sluices which he witnessed in his tour of North Vietnam seemed to indicate that the bombing was deliberate.

He added that he never saw antiaircraft or SAM missile emplacements on the dikes.

Oklahoma Turnout Predicted

New Business

Mayor Paul Steinkuhler, left, Norman Trautman, Lionel Charles, Chales Mollett and Mrs. W. C. Jones are shown here cutting the ribbon for a new Ag-Co-Op Service bulk plant in LaMonte. The ceremonies were held at 9 a.m. Tuesday. The plant has a 37,000 gallon capacity and is expected to generate about $100,000 in business annually, according to Mollett, branch manager.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Have Treatment Before Surgery

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have had an active duodenal ulcer for seven months. I get severe chest and upper back pains. I have followed a bland diet and have taken drugs to slow the secretion of acid, sedatives and am taking 24 teaspoons of Maalox a day and still can't obtain relief. Do you feel this could be healed without surgery after such a length of time? What do you think of surgery? I am 25 years old and after seven months of this it is starting to affect me psychologically.

Dear Reader — The last sentence of your letter may be the most important one. Ulcers and psychological factors go together. Men who are under constant frustration and stress are prone to develop ulcers. It is very difficult to heal an active ulcer unless the person's source of chronic frustration and mental stress is eliminated or at least controlled. This presupposes identifying the cause of stress. Sometimes this is the job situation, sometimes it is the family situation.

Before saying someone should have surgery for duodenal ulcer, it is my opinion that they should be treated in the hospital for a period of time. Several weeks of hospitalization with medical treatment for an ulcer, if it produces a cure, is better than spending several weeks in the hospital for unnecessary surgery.

Now, I hasten to add that surgery isn't always unnecessary. There are some people who do require it and one indication for it is unsuccessful medical treatment. I just don't believe that you can say that you have had unsuccessful medical treatment, however, until you have been essentially isolated in the hospital away from any of the sources of stress and that attention has been given toward the mental and emotional aspects which may have contributed to your problem and until a sufficient time under such controlled therapy has elapsed.

Most people who have surgery for treatment of an ulcer do quite well. There are a few who have difficulties afterwards. The surgery, however, will not resolve the underlying stress and frustration factors which may have contributed to the ulcer to begin with. These are best explored, faced, and dealt with.

How does cigarette smoking contribute to bleeding ulcers? Dr. Andre Robert, of the research staff of Upjohn, a pharmaceutical firm, thinks it's by an indirect means. The nicotine in the cigarette doesn't stimulate the stomach to produce more acid. Rather it slows down the production of a hormone in the duodenum just outside the stomach that stimulates the small intestine to release large amounts of alkaline digestive juice. This alkaline digestive juice is used to neutralize the acid stomach juice as it pours out of the stomach. If there isn't enough alkaline juice available, the digestive juices pouring out of the stomach remain acid and eat away at the duodenum in the location where ulcers are normally found.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A state Election Board official predicts that some 575,000 Oklahomans will vote in next Tuesday's primary elections.

Election Board Secretary Lee Slater said Tuesday hotly contested local races for county and legislative offices, along with the U.S. Senate and Corporation Commission races will play a major role in bringing about a heavy turnout.

In addition, Slater said, "there are a lot of voters between 18 and 23 who will be voting in their first election."

Slater said no one has made an exact estimate on the number of newly enfranchised voters there are in Oklahoma, but the U.S. Census Department has estimated there are about 138,000 persons in the 18-to-23 age group in the state.

"I expect Democrats to approach the 500,000 figure, which would be a moderately heavy turnout for this type of primary election," Slater said. "I anticipate about 75,000 Republicans will vote, which would be a moderate turnout."

The heaviest voter turnout in a primary election in Oklahoma in the past 10 years was in 1964 when 591,326 Democrats voted in the U.S. Senate race.

That year, four Democrats, including Sen. Fred Harris and the late J. Howard Edmondson, ran for the unexpired Senate term of the late Robert S. Kerr.

This year, 11 Democrats, two Republicans, two independents and one American Party candidate are seeking the Senate seat being vacated by Harris. Only the Democrats and Republicans will be on next Tuesday's ballot.

An even dozen candidates are seeking the state Corporation

Youngster Drowns Near St. Joseph

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Dale Carl Edwards of St. Joseph drowned at Rochester Falls on the Platte River about 12 miles northeast of here Tuesday, the highway patrol reported.

The patrol said Edwards, 44, was swimming alone when he called for help. A nearby fisherman responded to the calls but Edwards went under before he could be reached, officers said.

The body was recovered.

Commission post being vacated by the retirement of veteran Commissioner Wilburn Cartwright. Nine will be on the Democratic primary ballot. The other three include one Republican, one independent and one American Party candidate.

Oklahoma has about 1.2 million registered voters. If Slater's prediction comes true, it will mean about half the state's eligible voters will stay home next Tuesday.

Discuss Landlord's Rights

By PETER WEAVER

Q — I would like some information on an owner's rights in renting a single dwelling. I'm having a problem with a tenant. You wrote about "tenant's rights." What about landlord's rights? — R.B., Chelsea, Mass.

A — If you're worried about rent controls, the federal government's "price guidelines" do not apply to single duplex or quadruplex dwellings. The Apartment Owners and Managers Association says you should screen tenants carefully before you rent. The best letter of reference is from a former landlord. Credit checks are good but sometimes fail to reveal a prospective tenant's living habits.

For those who own more than one small rental property, it may be worthwhile to join AOMA. Dues are $50 a year and you get various services such as checking tenants' backgrounds and special tax information. For more information, write: AOMA, 65 Cherry Plaza, Watertown, Conn. 06795.

Maybe you have a problem with a tenant complaint about maintenance. If you're managing the rental yourself, you should get maintenance contracts for the major pieces of equipment and appliances.

The painless way to be a "micro landlord" is to have a real estate company manage the property for you. A good company will collect the rent, handle all complaints (a sore spot for new landlords), maintain the property, advise on insurance and tax matters. The fee is around seven per cent.

Get a "security deposit" (not a month's rent) from the tenant and put it in a savings account. It doesn't cost you anything and you can pay tenants' interest on whatever money they get back.

Q — About six years ago a local store carried a line of china in open stock. I bought service for 11, plus serving dishes. Now I can't find replacements for broken pieces. — Mrs. W. H., Los Angeles, Calif.

A — Unfortunately, some chinaware dealers allow customers to believe that "open stock" means they'll be able to buy the pattern indefinitely. Even the finest patterns are eventually discontinued.

When you buy inexpensive dinnerware, it's a good idea to buy a whole new set when enough pieces are broken. Chinaware bargains (usually Asian imports) and easy replacement just don't go together.

For replacement of fine china, a jewelry store or specialty decorator shop might help you locate the manufacturer.

Q — I have noticed that eggs vary in size in every carton. Are they priced by size or weight? — T.H.C., Los Angeles, Calif.

A — They price them by weight per dozen eggs. You can find some eggs in a "medium" box that are equal in size to those in a box of "large" eggs. The Department of Agriculture says you get a better price-per-weight buy in the large-size eggs if the price spread with the medium-size eggs is less than eight cents. Otherwise, the medium-size eggs are the best buy.

Q — I would like more information on the Distaff Staffers organization you mentioned in the column on working housewives. — Mrs. L.W., Raritan, N.Y.

A — It's a Washington, D.C., nonprofit employment agency that finds part-time professional jobs for housewives. The two women who started Distaff Staffers have written an excellent book (or kit), "The Best of Both Worlds," for anyone who would like to start a similar organization.

You can get a copy by sending $10 to: Distaff, Inc., 4000 Albemarle St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016. It's good reading for any restless housewife.

questions from readers for possible use in his column. Please send letters to him in care of this newspaper.)

37th Birthday For Federal Aid Program

The Social Security program celebrated its 37th birthday Monday according to C. Kent Charles, district manager.

Signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the midst of the Great Depression in 1935, the act today covers more than nine out of ten workers on every type of job and self-employment endeavor in over 27 million instances, Charles said.

First retirement benefits were paid in 1940, the director reported, with payments later encompassing survivorship and disability benefits.

Charles said the social security system serves as a foundation for family financial protection, explaining that "persons who have paid into the program for years have earned the right to receive their benefit checks — and to do so with dignity."

Nine Cases

Closed By Office Here

The Sedalia office of the Vocational Rehabilitation Section of the Department of Education, 515 South Kentucky, directed by district supervisor Edward E. McElwee, has closed nine cases as rehabilitated since January.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, nearly 7,000 disabled Missourians were placed in meaningful employment through the efforts of the organization, it was reported.

Vocational rehabilitation in Missouri is a state-federal partnership program that operates as a section of the State Department of Education. It attempts to help handicapped individuals to take a working place in society and to become as self-sufficient as possible.

To be eligible for vocational rehabilitation services, an individual must have a physical or mental disability that is a significant handicap to employment. There must also be a reasonable expectation that rehabilitation services will render the individual fit for a gainful occupation.

Services include evaluation, treatment, counseling, training, and placement.

City and County Expect $40,000 Each From Tax

Sedalians who began paying the additional two cents a gallon tax on gasoline purchases Sunday will help bring about $40,000 each to the Pettis County and city governments for use on street and road projects, officials estimated Wednesday.

Broken down, the city's projected share hypothetically represents about 26 additional blocks of slurry sealing, based on City Engineer Robert Cunningham's estimated cost of approximately $1,500 per block.

On the county level, the fund reflects an additional 24 miles of roadwork, double the present figure.

Lower Tax Level Is Obtained By Couple in County

Gary and Sandra Allen came out winners in their scrap with the Pettis County Board of Appeals. Wednesday the board decided to lower the property tax assessment on their Route 2 home from $7,300 to $5,800.

After being denied a tax break last month by the Pettis County Board of Equalization, the Allens vowed they would take their case to the State Tax Commission and, if necessary, hire a lawyer.

The Allens criticized the board's method of assessing property. They said the board assessed recently-bought real estate at a higher rate than property purchased several years ago.

They were not available for comment Wednesday.

In other action, the board concluded its last day of business by denying a request by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Yuille to have a $20,000 assessment lowered for property they own at 418-420 South Ohio.

According to the county clerk's office, seven persons appeared before the Board of Appeals this week.

Fischer Closes To Win

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer was only four points away from the world chess championship today after a draw in the 14th game with defending champion Boris Spassky.

Fischer led the match 8½-5½ after blunders by both players produced the draw Tuesday in a four-hour game of 40 moves.

The American challenger and the Russian meet again Thursday in their 15th game.

Then Spassky will be playing the white chessmen, giving him the advantage of the first move, but his chances of overtaking Fischer appear slimmer by the minute. The Yugoslav grandmaster, Svetozar Gligoric, said at the end of Tuesday's game: "Fischer is simply the better player."

With a win counting one point and a draw half, Fischer needs a total of 12½ to unseat Spassky. To keep his title, the Russian needs 12 points.

International grandmaster Isaac Kashdan said in an analysis for The Associated Press that Tuesday's game consisted of: "Part One—Fischer blunders, loses pawn; Part Two—Spassky blunders, returns pawn; Part Three—players realize they can do no more damage, agree on a draw."

Fischer played the Queen's Gambit Declined, but "Spassky had an easy time in developing his pieces," Kashdan said, while the American "moved his kingside pieces up and back in seemingly meaningless fashion."

"He may have been content with a draw in view of his big advantage in the score and was challenging Spassky to do something," the analyst commented.

"Fischer's 20th move was ... a serious error and Spassky was ready for it."

The Russian worked his queen into a strong position but "it was soon Spassky's turn to go wrong and he did, in almost incomprehensible fashion, on the 27th move," Kashdan said.

To maintain his chance to win, experts said, Spassky should have captured Fischer's knight but instead he moved a pawn.

They played another 13 moves, then Fischer stood and extended his hand to Spassky to signify his proposal for the draw.

Spassky accepted. As the audience streamed out of the sports hall, the Russian champion remained seated on stage, staring glumly at the chessboard.

Collision Involves Stolen Automobile

A car reported stolen Tuesday afternoon was involved in an accident at Sixth and Grand at 5:35 p.m. the same day.

Danny Haggerman, Versailles, reported to police his 1962 Pontiac convertible was taken from 724 West Seventh sometime between 4 and 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

A few minutes later the vehicle was involved in a non-injury accident at the intersection of Sixth and Grand. Haggerman's auto collided with a northbound 1969 Buick, driven by Donna Craig, 19, 824 South Monticello.

Miss Craig told police the driver of the eastbound Pontiac ran the stop sign at the intersection, collided with the auto she was driving and then proceeded south on Grand. She said he drove about half a block, then jumped from the auto and ran down an alley.

Police are looking for a juvenile boy in connection with both incidents.

County Court Judge E. L. Birdsong both indicated the money will be used to improve existing facilities instead of constructing new ones.

Although expressing appreciation for the additional revenue, Birdsong criticized the present procedure of allocating the money to counties.

"In cities, they get the money each month and can do what they want to with it," Birdsong said. "We have to submit a list of recommended projects and have it approved. We then have to have each project individually approved and then wait, sometimes for months, before receiving any funds."

Birdsong said he felt counties should not have to go through the longer procedure to receive funds while cities, especially smaller ones, did not.

Birdsong emphasized that the court usually encountered little difficulty in obtaining approval from the state inspection agents but nevertheless felt the "time-consuming" practice was not necessary.

"There are ten inspectors in the state and they are paid about $12,000 each. To me, that's $120,000 that could be used elsewhere," Birdsong said.

Fulbright Inquiry Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J.W. Fulbright has ordered an inquiry into Sen. Henry M. Jackson's allegation that the Russians "lied to President Nixon" in the final SALT negotiations in Moscow.

Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Tuesday he has directed the committee staff to question the Central Intelligence Agency about the report.

He asked Nixon for an explanation or denial.

Jackson, D-Wash., injected the allegation into the debate over the U.S.-Soviet interim agreement on offensive weapons and his amendment urging the United States to seek "equality" with the Soviet Union in any future permanent agreement.

Hope vanished for Senate action this week when Jackson and his opponents failed to agree on the time for a vote after a lengthy session with Senate leaders Tuesday.

But the House was scheduled to vote today on a resolution approving the agreement without amendment.

Jackson said the Russians told Nixon at the summit meeting in May that they had 48 Y-class nuclear submarines deployed or under construction.

"We now know they had only 42," Jackson told newsmen. He said his information came from intelligence sources he declined to identify.

He said that Russian overstatement of submarine strength at the summit meeting could have affected the terms of the interim agreement which limits Russia to 62 submarines and the United States to 44.

The continuing debate prompted Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott to accuse both sides of "bullheadedness." He said there's no chance of Senate action before Congress recesses Friday for two weeks, and possibly for the rest of the year.

Jackson told the Senate he is willing to accept the five-year agreement, despite the superior numbers it gives Russia in missiles and megatonnage, but not without a declaration that the United States will insist upon equality in future negotiations.

The White House has publicly endorsed the language of the Jackson amendment, without accepting his or any other interpretations or elaborations.

Fulbright and other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said they are puzzled as to why the administration would defend the interim agreement as in the interest of U.S. security and at the same time endorse an amendment implying that it puts the United States in an inferior strategic position.

Laborers Call Off Dock Strike

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of Britain's 42,000 longshoremen called off the 20-day-old dock strike today. But militant stevedores charged a sellout, raising the possibility that they would not heed the back-to-work order in the major ports.

Unofficial sources said the dock workers' delegates voted 53-30 to accept the settlement worked out by a joint union-management committee.

But when the decision was announced outside the headquarters of the Transport Workers' Union, one longshoreman charged into the conference room and hurled a metal ashtray at Jack Jones, head of the TWU and the chief union negotiator. It missed.

Then the militants turned on the police security cordon around the building, and fights broke out.

Some pickets tried to chase the dispersing delegates. Mounted police were called in to separate the combatants.

Furious longshoremen broke up a news conference Jones and other union leaders tried to hold. One man threw a glass of water into the union chief's face. Others shouted they had been betrayed in their fight for stronger job security and more severance pay.

One longshoreman shouted to Jones: "You are a leper! Where's your yellow arm band?"

Jones, shaken, cried to the mob: "I have done my best for you."

Slide at Fair Is Named in Damage Suit Filed Here

A $110,000 two-count personal injury suit was filed by a Jefferson City couple in Pettis County Circuit Court Wednesday against the owners of an amusement slide at the Missouri State Fairgrounds.

The suit names Mar-Mart Inc., St. Louis, as the defendants. The plaintiffs are Wanda and Ray Larsen.

The petition alleges that Wanda Larsen, on Aug. 25, 1971, was pushed down the slide by an employee of the company and was injured. She is seeking $50,000 for actual damages and $50,000 for punitive damages.

The petition further alleges that Mar-Mart Inc. was negligent and careless in its operation of the slide, failed to provide a sufficient number of employees to supervise patrons, and allowed too many patrons to use the slide at one time.

Ray Larsen, the plaintiff of the second count, is seeking $10,000 for injuries his wife allegedly received.

Grassroots Endeavor Sputtering

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The effort to broaden the base of the Republican party is off to a sputtering start as advocates of reform and their opponents accuse each other of trying to seize control of the 1976 GOP convention.

The Rules Committee of the Republican National Committee scheduled action today on subcommittee decisions that deal with reform moves.

One subcommittee narrowly approved Tuesday a new method for allocating delegates that would increase the convention strength of larger states. Small state delegates objected and plan to seek a Rules Committee reversal.

Another subcommittee proposed a 50-50 balance between men and women for the 1976 convention, but rejected a provision designed to bring more youths and blacks into the party.

Rules Committee decisions will be forwarded to the Republican National Committee. The national convention will act on them Monday.

Jack Gibson, a Rules Committee member from North Dakota, called the various delegate apportionment plans put forward by big state representatives "thinly disguised schemes for the assertion of power by one element of the party at the expense of another."

Charles T. Lanigan of New York, who helped draft the plan approved, said a rival proposal put forward by Gibson "would freeze the party on such a narrow base we would never elect anybody."

Gibson's plan was unveiled at the last minute by Sen. John Tower of Texas while the subcommittee already was considering the other plans before it. Within a short time it was endorsed by Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

The plan was defeated in subcommittee 6 to 5, the same vote by which Lanigan's plan was approved.

The Republicans must revise their delegate apportionment formula because the current one has been held unconstitutional by a federal district court. The ruling, now under appeal, was based on the award of six bonus delegates to each state that voted Republican in the last presidential election.

The Tower-Gibson plan would award three bonus delegates to every state voting Republican and a bonus equal to 40 per cent of that state's electoral vote.

If the whole sky were filled with full moons, they would give about one-fifth of the light which is given by the sun.

O'Brien Charges Bugging

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Democratic party chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien says he can prove that party offices, actually were bugged, and his lawyer intends to question seven top Republicans about it.

O'Brien, who was chairman at the time of a break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters, told a news conference Tuesday he has new evidence to prove that eavesdropping devices actually were installed for a time.

Meanwhile, Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern accused President Nixon of at least indirect responsibility for the incident.

"What is to prevent an administration that cooperates with that kind of thing from wiretapping your house, or your union hall, or something else they want to get?" McGovern told a labor rally in Lordstown, Ohio.

The White House declined comment on McGovern's statement. One of those arrested was James W. McCord, security chief for the Nixon campaign committee.

Bugging devices were confiscated at the time of the arrest.

Re-elect

Assessor Jerry Trotter's statement that the county will have more money for a reassessment of the county after it becomes a second-class county. "It's untrue," he said. McCune added that salary increases for county employees would eliminate the additional revenue.

Pete Stohr, 500 West Fourth, candidate for state representative from the 113th District, asked for full support from the party and said that if he is elected "they'll hear from me down there (Jefferson City)."

The Republicans delayed naming committees for the three state legislative districts.

In the Circuit courtroom earlier in the day, Buckley told the 60 Democrats attending the meeting that the Democrats can't "rest on our laurels" this election year.

"We're going to have stiff competition," Buckley said. He proposed that each Democratic committeeman and committeewoman obtain the names of five persons in their precinct or township who are not registered to vote and get them to register for the November general election.

He said special emphasis should be placed on registering the new voters in the 18 to 21 age bracket.

The Democratic county candidates were introduced at the meeting, but unlike their Republican counterparts, they did not speak.

Q—I have read with much interest and appreciation about the building expansion of the Bothwell Hospital. I have watched its growth with pride for many years. Sedalia may well become the medical center for Central Missouri.

I am aware that several hospitals in this state have built a wing for convalescent care of those patients eligible for Medicare extended care benefits. Will the Bothwell Hospital expansion program provide this care? There is no such facility under Medicare in Sedalia, and residents are being denied this benefit which is included in their monthly payments to Medicare and are having to travel out of town. —J. B.

A—Addresses to local service clubs by hospital administrator Don Feedback, and Ray Jiedel, assistant administrator, have explained that no Medicare extended care program is included in the present Phase I of the hospital's expansion. Both hospital officials have indicated in such talks that funding is not available to back such a program, explaining that all cost factors involving the Medicare extended care program must be separated from regular hospital operation, almost necessitating a separate but adjoining building for the Medicare recipients and staff.

It has been noted by both administrators that the possibility of obtaining such a facility might be realized in Phase III of the expansion program at Bothwell, but that funds available for the current $1,800,000 worth of expansion did not cover the expense of Medicare extended care facilities.

Q—What is the new state law on free textbooks? Does it provide for free textbooks to high school students, which the students have in the past been purchasing themselves? Is the local school board going to abide by this law?

If the present law, which is being challenged in the courts, is found to be constitutional, and local students have been required to provide their own books while the law is being tested, will they be reimbursed? —Mrs. C. W.

A—Superintendent of Schools Dr. T. J. Norris told Hot Line that the new law provides for students to be supplied with books via funds from the free textbook fund, which usually amounts to about $60,000 a year for school District 200, he said.

Norris explained that of the $60,000 figure, about $7,000 could be used for non-public schools. He added that $60,000 has never been enough to even provide public elementary students with new textbooks every year, let alone the entire school system. Since elementary students are given priority for receiving books under the new law, Norris said the possibility of providing free textbooks for the entire system under present funding was just not practical.

"In a sense," he explained, "it's a matter of the state providing legislative machinery, but not giving us anything to run it with." He said an additional $80,000 would be needed to cover textbook purchasing needs for the entire district, and that the chances of any kind of increase in the free textbook fund, let alone an $80,000 boost, are slim.

Q—Does a state trooper have the authority to direct drivers to violate a traffic control sign inside the city limits? Recently, a number of drivers were following the directions of a crosswalk sign near the Rival Manufacturing plant allowing workers to cross the street, when a trooper used his public address system to tell them to drive on. —A. P.

A—According to both Troop F Headquarters, Missouri State Highway Patrol, Jefferson City, and Chief of Police William Miller, a trooper does have the right to direct traffic within the city limits, depending upon the circumstances involving such direction. Miller said that city ordinances allowed any law enforcement officer the right to direct traffic in certain instances, as in the case of emergencies, for example. Miller said he was not aware of the circumstances involved in this specific incident, but added he was "confident the trooper had a good reason for his action."

Q—I wonder why it is necessary for Rival employees to park along East 17th Street when their parking lot is more than ample? Since the Medical Center went in at 17th and Ingram, the traffic has doubled along 17th Street, and there is often not room for two-way traffic. —B. C.

A—Rival Plant Supervisor John Houston told Hot Line that you were correct in stating the parking lot was adequate for the number of cars the firm's employees drive to work. He explained it was just a case of employees not choosing to park in the lot and park on the street instead. Houston emphasized employees had not been instructed to park in the street.

Says Food Supply Hurt By Uniform Seed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Research Council says the nation's food supply is imperiled by too much uniformity in seed farmers plant.

Thus, the NRC said in a report about the genetic vulnerability of crops, when a disease or insect finds a crop that is vulnerable, a large share of it is open to damage. An example, the report said, was the 1970 corn crop which was hit by southern leaf blight.

"The corn crop fell victim to the epidemic because of a quirk in the technology that had redesigned the corn plants of America until, in one sense, they had become as alike as identical twins," the report said.

But uniformity in good crops is desirable today because they are easier and more economical to harvest, mass process, handle and sell, the NRC said. However, this means that varieties of most genetically alike crops are highly susceptible to any mutant strain of organism that has the capability to attack them, the report said.

The report also said an epidemic similar to the 1970 corn crop, "might well have struck any of a number of crops, because uniformity has also become characteristic of commercial varieties of sorghum, millet, sugar beets, onions, cotton and cantaloupes, and it could become important in wheat."

The report proposed a "complete watchdog system" including a national monitoring committee be set up to keep track of potential hazard to genetically vulnerable crops.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has issued tightened regulations for computing payments to farmers for land set aside from production under 1973 crop programs.

Under the rules, farmers must set aside land of comparable quality to acres they keep in production or else have their governmental payments reduced.

The deductions next year will be increased in cases where adjustments are necessary to meet the intent of the set-aside program, officials said.

"For wheat and feed grains, when low-quality acreage is offered for set-aside—that is, acreage not representative of land on which the farm's crops are grown—the entire payment will be based on the productivity of the set-aside land," the department said.

The deduction rate for cotton will be comparable to wheat and feed grains, officials said.

Studies of 1971 and 1972 operations showed some farmers with poor and good land offered the poorer land for set-aside and accepted deductions from payments.

"The deductions were not enough to offset the monetary advantage gained by producing crops on the quality acreage rather than setting it aside from production," USDA said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher market prices for wheat have had an effect on the number of 1972-crop bushels farmers are putting under government price support loan, according to Agriculture Department figures.

As of July 31, the department said, farmers put 22 per cent less new-crop wheat under loan than they did a year earlier. Wheat prices strengthened in July, and in August, on reports of massive sales of grain to the Soviet Union.

When a farmer takes a price support loan, the grain cannot be sold until the loan is paid off. When cash prices are higher, farmers tend to sell rather than take out loans.

Pipeline Critics Preparing Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics of the proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline are preparing to appeal a court decision lifting a two-year-old ban on its construction.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge George L. Hart Jr. Tuesday raised the injunction he had imposed in April 1970, on grounds that the Interior Department has now met legal requirements for permitting construction to begin.

After two days of legal arguments, Hart rejected pleas for further delay.

Three environment groups, the Wilderness Society, Environmental Defense Fund, and Friends of the Earth, won the injunction 28 months ago by convincing Hart the Interior Department could not permit construction of the pipeline without first studying its environmental impact.

They returned Monday to argue that the impact study published last March was still inadequate and that Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton's intention, announced last May, to issue the necessary permits would violate legal land-use restrictions.

Hart, in a brief opinion Tuesday, concluded that Interior's environmental statement "reasonably meets all requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act" and that the proposed permits "are authorized by law."

The environment groups said they would appeal immediately. Alaska Gov. William Egan said in Juneau that state attorneys are discussing ways of getting the case before the Supreme Court.

One route under discussion, said Deputy State Atty. Gen. Norman Gorsuch, is attempting to bypass the circuit court and appealing directly to the Supreme Court on grounds a matter of great national interest is involved.

Hart told newsmen he believes the case will eventually be heard by the Supreme Court because it is probably "the most important environmental case before the courts."

In his formal opinion, Hart stated: "It is deemed imperative that the appellate process be initiated as soon as possible."

"In view of this situation, and the tremendous costs involved, this court will not delay this matter by detailed findings of fact that are undisputed, nor by an exhaustive legal opinion which would require weeks and months to complete."

Plaintiff in Suit

Larry O'Brien, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, announced Tuesday that he is the plaintiff in the $1 million civil damage suit arising from the burglary and attempted bugging of the committee headquarters last June. Last week, the U.S. District Court ruled that the committee, as an unincorporated body, did not have standing to sue. O'Brien said he is proceeding with the suit on behalf of all registered Democratic voters in the U.S.

Airlines Don't Consider One-Liners Very Funny

MIAMI (AP) — If you spot your friend Jack at the airport or, worse yet, on an airplane, don't try to be funny by yelling "Hi Jack!" A growing number of would-be jokesters can testify that airlines don't laugh at the one-liners.

"Everybody's so sensitive about hijackings now," said George Kokus, deputy chief of the U.S. attorney's criminal division in Miami. "But it's an irresistible impulse to make a joke and the next thing a person knows, he's in jail."

Kokus said in an interview that at least a dozen persons have been arrested at the international airports in Miami and Fort Lauderdale in the past year after airline employees or passengers reported they overheard comments about hijacking.

"Most of those arrested have been convicted and all of them spent at least one night in jail," said Kokus.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Barbara Vicevich said most of the cases involve the misdemeanor charge of "giving a false report of a hijacking," but that a jokester could end up facing a charge of interfering with a flight crew, a felony which carries a maximum prison term of 20 years.

She cited the case of Vito Leanza Jr., a 20-year-old Fort Lauderdale youth who faces a preliminary hearing Aug. 23 on a charge of giving a false report of a hijacking, which is punishable upon conviction by a maximum sentence of one year in jail.

Leanza has pleaded innocent, claiming it all started when he tried to use humor to win a prize during a contest on a National Airlines flight from New York to Fort Lauderdale July 26.

The airline passed out slips of paper to passengers, asking them to guess what time the aircraft would pass over St. Augustine, Fla. The winner was to be awarded a bottle of champagne. The consolation prize was a deck of cards.

According to the U.S. attorney's office, Leanza wrote "two days later" as his guess, adding on the reverse side of the slip of paper, "due to hijacking, stopover at Jacksonville for ransom money."

Leanza, reached at his home in Fort Lauderdale, described the affair as "a stupid little incident." He declined to discuss his case further because of the pending hearing.

Dr. Abraham Golf, a New York physician, was sentenced to one year's probation Monday after he pleaded guilty to making a false report about a bomb.

The government charged that when a stewardess asked Golf to move a bag near his airline seat last week, the doctor replied, "Don't touch that bag. I have a bomb in it." Golf and his wife were hustled off the jet at Fort Lauderdale and arrested. The bag turned out to be empty.

Two other persons arrested by the FBI at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport earlier this month say a real hijacking inspired them to crack a joke about sky piracy.

The FBI arrested Ordie P. Taylor Jr., 53, and Dewey Duckett Jr., 41, of Columbus, S.C., when a passenger in the Delta Airlines waiting lounge reported overhearing one of the two men saying, "There's our plane. Let's go hijack it."

The pair, both federal poverty program officials, were in town for a convention when a contingent of fellow officials from Detroit missed their original flight to Miami. That missed flight was hijacked to Algeria.

"Jokes were floating all over the place because of this," a friend of the two arrested men said later. "Their's just happened to be overheard."

Charges against Duckett were dropped, but Taylor still faces a preliminary hearing before a U.S. magistrate Aug. 29.

Walt Robshaw, National's public relations manager, denies that airlines have completely lost their sense of humor.

"But let's face it," he said, "these hijackings and extortion threats have been going on for

Injuries Are Fatal

ALTON, Mo. (AP) — Injuries received when a tree he was cutting fell on him have claimed the life of Kirby Johnson, 13, of Alton.

Johnson died Tuesday at a West Plains, Mo., hospital.

Brinlee Divorce Is Filed

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Mrs. Rex Brinlee has filed a divorce action against Rex Brinlee Jr., who is serving a life sentence for the bombing death of a young Bristow school teacher, it was learned Tuesday.

No hearing date has been set for the action, filed last May.

Mrs. Brinlee claims "incompatibility and extreme cruelty." She seeks custody of their 13-year-old son and all of their property.

She asks for the 710-acre Mayes County Brinlee Ranch, equipment, tools, trucks and livestock on the ranch. Also a 38-unit apartment house in Tahlequah; a steak house, bar and night club properties north of Tahlequah, a store in Tulsa, two lots in Tulsa, a lot and cabin on Grand Lake and a Cessna 172 Skyhawk plane.

Brinlee was served a summons at the Oklahoma State Penitentiary where he is serving life for the February, 1971, death of Mrs. Fern Bolding, the wife of a witness against Brinlee in an auto theft case at the time. He also faces trial for the thefts of a boat and an auto in Tulsa County and two Cherokee County trials for possession of a stolen car and a truck.

Mrs. Brinlee was charged at one time with attempting to help him escape from the Creek County jail.

Hearnes Agrees To Work Halt

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has agreed to order a halt to preliminary work at the southeast Missouri site of a maximum security prison.

Hearnes said Tuesday he agrees with a request for the delay by Democratic gubernatorial candidate Edward Dowd. Both Dowd and his Republican opponent Christopher Bond have spoken against the $9 million prison site at Steele.

"It's a valid request being so close to a change in administrations," said Hearnes. "I'm happy to honor this request."

He said construction hinges on a bond issue to finance the prison and the state Senate has opposed bond issues in general. Last week Atty. Gen. John Danforth said he would not sign a contract for preliminary work. The site needs to be considered further, he said.

Kidney Transplant At V. A. Hospital

KANSAS CITY (AP) — William F. Vogt of Rockville, Mo., was reported in good condition after undergoing the first kidney transplant at Kansas City's Veterans Hospital.

Vogt, 42, underwent the 3½-hour operation late Monday and early Tuesday and was reported "sitting up and eating with no difficulty" Tuesday night.

The kidney was functioning normally, a hospital spokesman said.

The donor was a 24-year-old woman who died over the weekend in Georgia.

Convict Slashes Throat

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Johnny Lee Brooks, convicted of blinding a 17-year-old so she could not connect him with a robbery, was in serious condition early today after he slashed his throat in his St. Louis city jail cell.

Sheriff Ray Percich said Brooks somehow obtained a razor and slashed his throat Tuesday less than an hour before he was to have been taken to the state penitentiary in Jefferson City to start serving his sentences.

Brooks was sentenced to 55 years in prison for blinding Wilma Chestnut with a broken drinking glass and 15 years for a robbery she said she had seen him participate in.

Witnesses at his trial in May testified Brooks blinded the girl after he and two companions robbed an apartment where she was babysitting. A record player and recorder were taken from the apartment.

Percich said Brooks had told a deputy he wouldn't go to prison and would kill himself if anyone tried to take him.

While Lyle Fiddles, Yanks Lose to KC

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Manager Ralph Houk of the New York Yankees sat there nibbling on a sandwich while he anticipated the obvious question. It came from a half dozen mouths almost in unison: "Why didn't you use Sparky Lyle?"

Houk shifted the food in his mouth and smiles.

"That shows you," Houk said, "how important Sparky Lyle is to us."

Lyle, who has saved 28 games for New York, fiddled while the Yankees burned and bowed 7-6 under the impact of a three-run, ninth-inning outburst by the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night.

"I decided to give Sparky another day's rest," Houk explained. "He had pitched seven of eight days, and he just had to have two full days off or risk the danger of hurting his arm. You just can't take a chance.

"We lose him and then what?"

Houk asked the question but didn't answer it. Nobody pressed him because they, too, knew the answer.

The Yankees are only two games out of first place after a spectacular surge up the American League East ladder. They need Lyle if they expect to overhaul first-place Baltimore and runner-up Detroit.

"If I'd brought Lyle in and he got hurt," Houk added, "I'd never forgive myself."

Lyle last pitched in the first game of Sunday's doubleheader against the Milwaukee Brewers in New York.

Pinch hitter Amos Otis started the rally that nipped the Yankees with a leadoff single. Carl Taylor, another pinch hitter, singled, and the runners advanced on Fred Patek's sacrifice.

Steve Hovley tied the score at 6-6 with a single. Richie Scheinblum sacrificed Hovley to second, and Lou Piniella lashed a single to center, scoring Hovley with the winning run. Ron Gardner, 4-1, fifth Yankee pitcher, was the loser.

The Yankees had gone ahead 6-4 in the top of the ninth on Bobby Murcer's two-run triple off reliever Tom Burgmeier, 6-2.

Earlier in the game, Paul

Schaal hit a three-run homer for the Royals. Felipe Alou struck one with two mates aboard to tie the game for the Yankees at 4-4 in the seventh.

"That was a rough one," Houk admitted. "We just haven't blown any ball games. There again you can see just how important Sparky Lyle is to us...we couldn't take a chance..."

Ali, Frazier Negotiations At Standstill

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Negotiations for a heavyweight title return match between champion Joe Frazier and No. 1 challenger Muhammad Ali are at an impasse.

Bruce Wright, secretary of Cloverly Corp., Frazier's backer since 1965, said negotiations with Jack Kent Cooke are at a standstill. Cooke holds an option on the return bout.

"We told them what we want and we even offered to drop the guarantee and work on a percentage, but they wouldn't go along," Wright said.

Wright said he also has given a "go ahead" to two promoters for a match with George Foreman, the 1968 Olympic champion, who is unbeaten as a professional.

"Madison Square Garden told us that they can work out the tax situation in New York and we agreed to fight Foreman there," Wright said. "We also agreed to take the same match to the Houston Astrodome. But at both ends they were apparently unable to get Foreman. At least, we haven't heard from them."

The World Boxing Association has ordered Frazier to defend his title against a ranking contender, notably Ali, and has threatened to lift the title if he doesn't comply. Frazier hasn't defended against a fighter in the top 10 heavyweight rankings in nearly a year and a half.

Collins Leads US Olympic Squad

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Doug Collins of Illinois State scored 32 points as he led the U.S. Olympic basketball team to an 82-76 overtime victory over the American Basketball Association Stars Tuesday night.

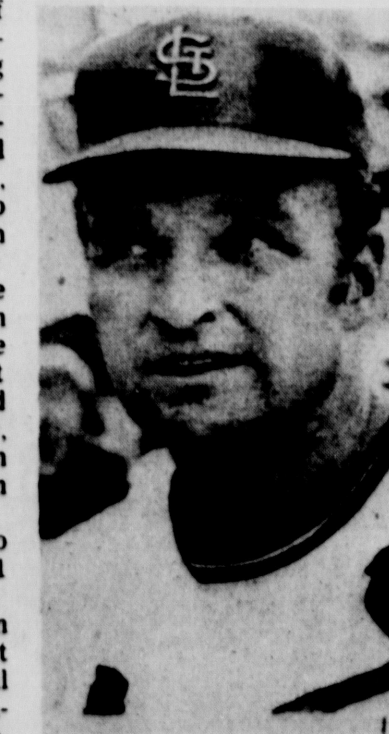

The Stars were made up mainly of Carolina Cougar players, competing under Larry Brown, the new Carolina coach.

The regulation game ended at 68-68, but Dwight Jones scored six of the Olympians 14 points in the extra period and also blocked a number of shots.

Sullivan Dies

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — Joseph E. Sullivan, 77, president and treasurer of a firm which prints programs for more than 40 race tracks from Maine to Florida, died Tuesday at his home.

He was one of the 10 original owners of the former Boston Patriots of the American Football League, now the New England Patriots of the National Football League.

Sox Sign Moe

Veteran righthanded reliever Moe Drabowsky was picked up by the Chicago White Sox Tuesday. He had been released earlier this week by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Too Late

Detroit's Dick McAuliffe scoops up dirt as he is forced out at second base during the opening inning of the Tigers-Minnesota Twins game Tuesday night in Detroit.

Boston Antics No Joke To the Texas Rangers

Associated Press Sports Writer
The Boston Red Sox pulled the curtain down on the Texas Rangers but it was nothing like the act they played in the dressing room afterwards.

After beating the Rangers 3-0 on John Curtis' three-hitter Tuesday night, Tommy Harper helped play a joke on reporters. Reggie Smith, who hit two home runs, wouldn't talk to anybody. And Manager Eddie Kasko was extremely short of patience.

The Red Sox, who've reportedly had internal problems of late with players sparring verbally, appeared to level some of their frustrations at visitors after Tuesday night's game in Arlington, Tex.

Harper sat on Smith's stool while a Texas broadcaster mistakenly congratulated him on his two-homer night. The rest of the Red Sox laughed at the broadcaster's blunder.

Then, when Smith finally appeared at his locker, he refused to answer questions. Staring blankly while he was questioned, the Red Sox outfielder soon stroled away to shave.

Kasko, when later facing the same reporters, kept his comments short and sweet.

Said one writer: "He was surly. It seemed like he wished that we'd just go away as soon as possible."

Things were relatively tame around the rest of baseball's American League as the Minnesota Twins nipped the Detroit Tigers 7-6 in 13 innings; the Cleveland Indians beat the California Angels 4-3 in 10 innings; the Kansas City Royals turned back the New York Yankees 7-6 and the Chicago White Sox trimmed the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1.

The fourth-place Red Sox moved within four games of the front-running Baltimore Orioles in the tight American League East race. The Orioles were idle Tuesday night.

Jim Nettles and Rod Carew each singled in a run as Minnesota rallied to beat Detroit in the 13th inning. The burst broke, a 5-5 tie and offset a run in the Tigers' half of the frame on Gates Brown's homer.

The second-place Tigers dropped 1½ games behind the Orioles and maintained a half-game lead on the Yankees, who are in third place.

Cleveland, another team in that wild pennant chase, won with a two-run rally in the bottom of the 10th. Frank Duffy's bases-loaded single with two out capped the outburst.

California had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the 10th on Bob Oliver's third RBI of the game before the fifth-place Indians came back to win and move within eight games of Baltimore.

Twenty-year-old jockey, Johnny Breen, currently riding at Monmouth Park, Oceanport, N.J., is the son of former jockey Bobby Breen.

Last CFL TV Game Tonight

TORONTO (AP) — The Ottawa-Toronto game tonight in the Canadian Football League will be the last CFL game televised to the United States this season, Jake Gaudaur, CFL commissioner, said Tuesday.

The final 12 games which had been scheduled for television viewing in the United States will not be seen. The game between the Ottawa Rough Riders and the Toronto Argonauts is the eighth of the series.

In some U.S. cities, the games are seen on a delayed basis.

The CFL will receive the full $100,000 it was paid by Ralmar Sports Productions, Inc., for the 1972 season, Gaudaur said. He said the firm, headed by former major league baseball player Ralph Kiner and television producer Marty Rosenblatt, both of New York, is exercising its option to buy the 1973 rights for $150,000.

In a statement, Gaudaur said the early termination of the 1972 series was primarily due to a lack of national advertising.

The games shown this year went out over more than 100 channels in the United States and Gaudaur said he was told that in some areas they drew better than Gunsmoke or Dean Martin.

Junior Olympics Open

Laurie Bremer, a Spokane, Wash., gymnast, smiles after lighting the torch to open the 1972 Amateur Athletic Union's Junior Olympics in Spokane Tuesday night. More than 650 athletes between the ages of 11 and 17 for 50 states and Guam, are participating in the games. (UPI)

In the Big 8

MU, KU, 'Cats Open Practice

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas State, Kansas and Missouri become the first Big Eight Conference teams Thursday to open practice for the 1972 college football wars.

Nebraska and Colorado, two of the nation's top-ranked teams, begin drills Friday. The other three, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Iowa State don't start work until next week.

No contact can be held the first three days because of a National Collegiate Athletic Association regulation.

Some 110 players, among them 31 lettermen, will report to Coach Vince Gibson at Kansas State.

"We've got 45 juniors," notes Gibson, whose team won three of its last four tests in 1971. "and I think you can win with juniors if you've got an experienced quarterback."

The Wildcats have an experienced quarterback in Dennis Morrison, who finished last season second to Nebraska's departed quarterback, Jerry Tagge, in passing with 157 completions in 333 pitches for 1,780 yards and eight touchdowns. Morrison was third in the conference in total offense.

Kansas will have 29 lettermen on its squad of 86, small compared to other schools but Coach Don Fambrough feels the Jayhawks have more quality players this year.

Junior David Jaynes will be the quarterback at Kansas. As a sophomore, he hit on 64 of 137 passes for 748 yards and seven scores.

"Our depth situation should be better than it was last fall," says Fambrough, starting his second season as head coach. "Our biggest problem will be our offensive line where there will be a lot of young people playing."

Missouri will have a squad of nearly 100 but only 24 lettermen. Ed Johndrow, the starting quarterback most of last season, will be scholastically ineligible. Johndrow's duties will be taken over by Jack Cherry, a junior college transfer, who can throw and run the option well.

The Tigers will turn to the wishbone this year. In addition to some other junior college backs, the Bengals will count on veterans Jack Bastable and Don Johnson plus Bill Ziegler, who led the Tiger freshmen in ground gaining and scoring in 1971.

Missouri has a long way to go, having won only one of 11 games a year ago.

Nebraska finished No. 1 in the country in 1971 just as it did a year earlier and thus will be seeking its third straight national title. Oklahoma was No. 2 and Colorado No. 3.

Oklahoma, banking on Dave Robertson to fill Jack Mildren's quarterback shoes, launches its practice season Aug. 21 as does Oklahoma State. Iowa State begins Aug. 24. The start of drills is governed by an NCAA rule which takes a school's opening game and beginning of classes into consideration.

Black Boycott

Three More Join Withdrawal List

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Three more black African nations—Liberia, Ghana and Ethiopia—have joined Tanzania, Sierra Leone and Zambia in withdrawing from the Olympics because of plans to allow Rhodesian athletes to compete in the Games, which begin Aug. 26.

And there are reports that the number of boycotting nations would increase. Cairo, Egypt, Sudan and Nigeria are expected to join the list, and possibly Uganda and Guyana.

Despite the announced withdrawals on Tuesday, a spokesman for the Olympic Organizing Committee said no official word had been received in Munich.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said, "This is politics, pure politics. We are not concerned with politics. All sportsmen will be here."

"We made an agreement a year ago with all the National Olympic Committees concerned. Rhodesia was invited. Rhodesia will participate. We think for the moment that the question is settled."

A 44-member Rhodesian team arrived in Munich last week. It included seven black athletes and a black trainer.

The Organization of African Unity is against Rhodesia's participation in the Games, claiming there is sufficient evidence that discrimination in sports exists in the country.

Don Gullett Regains Form

Associated Press Sports Writer
"That was about as close as he can get to himself without being there," Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench said of battery-mate Don Gullett.
How's that again?
"I can't really tell if I'm back to myself just yet," Gullett added.
A little clarification, please.
Well, Gullett, who posted a 16-6 record last season, had been expected to be a major factor in the Reds' drive to the top of the National League's West Division this year.
But the 21-year-old left-hander contracted hepatitis in January—a condition the Reds didn't even discover until May—and had been virtually useless to the baseball club this season. For two innings he'd be able to blaze in his fast ball, then he'd get so weak he could barely wind up to pitch.

But on Tuesday night, outfielder Pete Rose said, "He looked like he used to." And Bench added: "His ball really jumped at times and when he reared back and wanted to throw it, he could do it."
Gullett got the call after just one inning in Philadelphia when Cincinnati starter Wayne Simpson was forced out of the game after reinjuring a calf muscle.

The 6-foot Kentuckian came out of the bullpen and, for the next eight innings, hurled four-hit shutout ball, striking out eight and walking just one to provide the Reds with a 3-0 victory over the Phillies.
Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles defeated Pittsburgh 8-6, the New York Mets blanked Atlanta 5-0, San Francisco beat the Chicago Cubs 7-5, San Diego slugged St. Louis 7-1 and Montreal edged Houston 3-2 in 10 innings.
Tony Perez singled home the only run the Reds needed in the first inning and they scored two more in the fifth on Bobby Tolan's RBI single and loser Wayne Twitchell's wild pickoff throw attempt that allowed Joe Morgan to scamper home from third.

Fairbanks, Alaska To Loser's Bracket

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Top-seeded Fairbanks, Alaska, faces an uphill battle in the National Baseball Congress Tournament.
The Alaskans, runners-up in last year's tourney, dropped a 3-2 decision to Worthington,

Ohio, in 11 innings Tuesday night in their first game in this year's double-elimination meet.
In other games Tuesday, Valdosta, Ga., clubbed Lexington, Ky., 8-1 in a first-round game and Midlothian, Ill., eliminated La Grange, Tex., 11-1.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cougars of the World Hockey Association today announced the signing of defenseman Larry Kahan, a veteran of 13 seasons in the National Hockey League. He was with Seattle of the Western Hockey League last season.

Main event — Danny Little Bear won the $800 prize in the eight-man battle royal.

The Dodgers, edging within two games of the second-place Astros in the West, used Willie Davis' two-run homer in the sixth inning, his third round-tripper in two games, to turn back the Pirates.
And the Mets, celebrating an anniversary of sorts, began dreaming of their glory season of 1969. It was just three years ago that New York, 9½ games behind first-place Chicago, began their incredible charge toward the top of the East Division. Now they trail first-place Pittsburgh by nine games.

"Nothing is impossible," Jim McAndrew said before he and reliever Tug McGraw combined for a five-hit shutout against the Braves. "I think we're a better team than we were in '69. Of course, the Pirates are a better team than the Cubs were then, but the Pirates haven't had a slump."
Ed Kranepool drove in two runs with a homer and a single and Tommie Agee hit a two-run homer to lead the Mets past Atlanta.

Rookie Garry Maddox of the Giants had one of the biggest days of his career by driving in six runs with a pair of homers, one of them his first major league grand slam. It enabled Juan Marichal, 5-13, to post his first victory in more than a month although he needed relief help to beat the Cubs.
Clarence Gaston and Fred Kendall drove in two runs apiece and Mike Caldwell scattered six hits to carry the Padres past the Cardinals.
And Mike Jorgensen drove in two Expos runs, the latter a tie-breaking two-out single in the 10th inning that turned back the Astros.

Ryun Solid Choice in 1,500

Heavy Competition Expected in 5,000

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Jim Ryun's third crack at a gold medal may be overshadowed this year by a race most consider potentially the greatest at the 20th Olympiad—the 5,000-meter run.
America has two fine entrants in Steve Prefontaine and George Young, the latter competing in his fourth Olympics, a record for an American distance runner. But the two, along with Leonard Hilton, face as many as 10 others who could break the Olympic record of 13 minutes 39.6 seconds.
In fact, the predictions are that it'll take at least 13:40 just to make the finals.
Meanwhile, Ryun appears a solid choice in the 1,500-meter run, the metric mile. In 1964, the teen-aged Ryun failed to make the finals. In 1968, at high-altitude Mexico City, he lost the gold to Kip Keino of Kenya and finished second.
Keino is back this year, reportedly planning to triple in the 1,500 the 5,000 and the steeplechase.
Ryun, 25, has not approached his world record 3:33.1 in years and even in winning the U.S. trials at Eugene, Ore., did only 3:41.5. But his form was good, his feet flashed as of old and experts said Ryun had returned.
His top competition could come from Francesco Aresè of Italy or a host of Englishmen. Bob Wheeler and Jerome Howe round out the American contingent with both having recorded sub-3:40 times this year.
The 5,000, however, is the race of the Games.
Prefontaine set the American record of 13:22.8 in winning the trials at Eugene with Young second in 13:29.4. Both times pale in light of Dave Bedford's 13:17.2, second best ever recorded and only six tenths off the world mark set by Ron Clarke in 1966.
Bedford, the brittle-tough Englishman, had not planned to run the 5,000 this year until he blazed the fast time at London.

Finland's one-two punch of Lasse Viren and Juha Vaatainen, with life bests of 13:18 and 13:32.6, England's Ian McCafferty and Ian Stewart and Russia's Rashid Sharafiyetdinov, as well as five East European runners make the race even tougher to predict.
One man who could win it all, however, is Ethiopia's Mirus Ifefer, a virtual unknown last year who showed explosive power in the Pan-Africa Games at Durban, N.C.
The 10,000 is also talent-laden, with Bedford heading the list. His 27:52.8 earlier this year is the fourth best time in history, the same time in which Vaatainen won the European title in 1971.

Finland's Viren blazed 27:52.4 for No. 3 on the all-time list earlier this year and should be the favorite but the tactics of the race may be too much.
America's Frank Shorter has a shot if the former Yale and Florida Track Club star sets a hot pace and stays in front. Shorter doesn't have the late speed of the Europeans. In fact, Shorter's lifetime best of 28:12 was set earlier this year at the AAU championships as he ran second to late-kicking Greg Fredericks of Penn State. Mike Manley is the top U.S. entrant in the 3,000-meter steeplechase and he has the best chance of winning the event of any American since Horace Ashenfelter did 20 years ago.

The 30-year-old Oregon school teacher is a true veteran of the event with a lifetime best of 8:27.6, second best ever by an American.
Unfortunately, more than a dozen men have run faster than that this year already, including world record holder Kerry O'Brien of Australia, whose mark of 8:22.0 could fall. Bronislaw Malinowski of Poland has already done 8:22.2 this year with Anders Garderud of Sweden and Kazmierz Maranda of Poland recording fast times of 8:23.6 Bulgaria's Mikhail Zhelev has run 8:25.4.

Keino's 8:30.0 in his first attempt at the steeplechase shows he could surprise this good field.

Landry Warning

Don't Count Cowboys Out

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Don't count the Dallas Cowboys out of the Super Bowl just because they've lost starting quarterback Roger Staubach with a shoulder separation and traded powerful running back Duane Thomas to San Diego.
That's what Coach Tom Landry says.
"Most people will write us off," Landry said Tuesday.
The Cowboy coach was quick to point out, however, that Craig Morton, the first-string quarterback before yielding the job to Staubach last season, was capable of directing the club, and running back Calvin Hill, National Football League offensive Rookie of the Year in 1969, was regaining his old form after being slowed by a knee injury last season.
Meanwhile, backfield coach Dan Reeves was reactivated to back up Morton, and Staubach was optimistic while recuperating in Baylor Hospital in Dallas.
"I'll be okay," said Staubach, who underwent surgery Sunday after being injured Saturday night in an exhibition game against Los Angeles.
"I'll come back stronger than ever."

Barkum, the New York Jets' No. 1 draft choice from Jackson State, ended his holdout and signed his 1972 contract.

Offensive tackle Don Yochum, the Philadelphia Eagles' No. 2 draft pick from Syracuse University who had agreed to terms Monday, left the club Tuesday and signed with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.
"Everything seemed to be in order," said Pete Retzlaff, Eagles' general manager. "We sent him to Graduate Hospital to take his physical while I prepared the contract. He never came back."

Twenty-four Pittsburgh Steelers players and six coaches, including head coach Chuck Noll, were stricken with virus. But it didn't stop any of them from practicing Tuesday.

The Oakland Raiders said running back Clarence Davis would be out 10 weeks with a broken bone in his right shoulder, suffered in Monday night's exhibition game against Baltimore.

Bliss nipped by a stroke Randy Lewis of West Frankfort, Ill. The other two qualifiers were Bruce Hollowell, Springfield, Mo., 145, and Jay Hass, Belleville, Ill., 146.

Civil Defense Manual Is Updated in Sedalia

Sedalia's conscious of the need for effective emergency relief aid, in the event of man-made or natural catastrophe, will be heartened by the job just finished by Mrs. Terry Cairer, 1425 South Grand, secretary of the Pettis County Civil Defense office.

Under the supervision of Civil Defense Director Jerry Luchs, Mrs. Cairer Friday completed the first extensive updating of the Civil Defense information manual since the office was first authorized by city statute in 1962.

"It was really time that we did this because updating is very necessary," Mrs. Cairer said. "It wouldn't do much good to direct someone in an emergency to go to a drug store that isn't there anymore. Also, many new firms that we included this time weren't even in business 10 years ago."

"Also," she continued, "We have an updating of all current city councilmen and Civil Defense personnel."

As Mrs. Cairer's statement indicates, the manual's listings are not just confined to fallout shelters and hospitals. Nearly 10 pages are spent on church listings alone. Other classifications include construction firms, schools, organizations, city engineering and construction employees, tractor dealers and citizens band emergency two-way radio personnel.

Besides these itemized categories, the guide includes an extensively modernized chain-of-command procedure to be followed in case of emergency. At the pinnacle of the pyramid is the Civil Defense Emergency Center in the police station.

"That's where it all begins after we are notified," Luchs said. "We then go from there, based on procedural guidelines. This really hasn't changed that much. It's just that now we have a current listing of people to contact."

The project, which began in April, was often a tedious effort, Mrs. Cairer said.

"I just had the phonebook and went from there. It took a lot of looking and busy signals before I got all I needed," she added.

Luchs's efforts at updating the manual, which is technically required by the state every two years, earned him commendation from Mayor Jerry Jones, who indicated that "Luchs has taken the position more seriously than past directors. We were supposed to update it every two years but we never did."

Mrs. Cairer indicated she hopes the increased activities of the Civil Defense office will make more people aware of the office's functions.

"Right now, when people call in they usually call the police department. We hope now they'll start calling us," she said.

Medicare Excesses Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says the federal government may have paid $380 million in illegal Medicare claims, including charges for television sets and private nurses.

Aspin Tuesday cited a recent Government Accounting Office survey of nearly 14 hospitals in five states which he said showed "nearly $500,000 had been illegally charged to Medicare out of a total $20 million paid in Medicare claims."

"Federal funds have been used to pay for private-duty nurses, TV sets, and telephone service for Medicare patients—all illegal under federal law," he said in a statement.

"These overpayments are the fault of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and its contractors such as Blue Cross—not the hospitals themselves."

"If HEW and Blue Cross administer the whole Medicare program as indicated by the sample GAO report, then the federal government has been gyped out of approximately $380 million."

The reason for the overcharges, he added, is "perverse mismanagement, administrative procedures and incomplete audits by HEW and private insurance companies such as Blue Cross."

Aspin urged HEW Secretary Elliot Richardson to "tighten up and simplify the regulations so that the proper benefits are paid to the needy and that hospitals are not inadvertently overcompensated for their services."

McGovern Pledges End To Wage-Price Controls

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern, claiming greater confidence than ever that he can beat President Nixon, has pledged to end wage-price controls within 90 days after taking office.

With little advance fanfare, the Democratic nominee declared he would order a return to a free market upon ending the Vietnam war and reducing military spending.

In comments to a group of Illinois labor leaders Tuesday night, McGovern said: "When the war is ended and waste is stopped, we can end wage and price controls, and I think that can be done within 90 days of the inauguration. And I'm committed to that goal."

McGovern's economic pledge capped a day of campaigning Tuesday in Ohio and Illinois in which he asserted that Nixon himself was at least indirectly involved in an attempt to spy on Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington.

McGovern planned to court the farm vote today after reaping a new round of labor endorsements Tuesday.

As he addressed a cheering group of United Auto Workers near General Motors' Lordstown, Ohio, plant the 1.4-million-member union announced it had voted overwhelmingly to endorse the South Dakotan.

At the same time, the International Ladies Garment Workers, with 450,000 members, tendered its support by way of a unanimous executive-board decision.

On the minus side, the 380,000-member Indiana AFL-CIO declared it would follow the lead of national federation President George Meany and remain neutral.

And McGovern's much-awaited meeting with Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, whom McGovern forces helped oust from the Democratic National Convention last month, was called off for another week.

The senator said Daley had called him at Lordstown to ask a postponement for "urgent personal reasons."

McGovern's revised schedule called for a visit to a small family farm near Springfield today, then an address to perhaps more than 15,000 persons at the Illinois State Fair, followed by a conference with state party and Farmers Union leaders.

McGovern said after his earlier appearances in Ohio, including a traffic-stopping hand-shaking tour of Youngstown, that he was "considerably more confident that I can win this election than I was that I would win the nomination in the first place."

The candidate also unveiled his strongest line to date on the June 17 incident in which five men, some with financial and professional ties to Nixon's re-election committee, were arrested inside Democratic headquarters in Washington.

At one point, McGovern referred to the quintet as "Mr. Nixon's crew." Asked if that means he thinks the President is personally involved in the apparent bugging attempt, he replied, "I lay it at least indirectly to him."

Because it didn't spoil and was highly nourishing, flour was the basic food of frontiersmen in the West. Dried beans, game and preserved meats followed in importance.

Fairfax Is Selected For Committee Job

Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax was named chairman of the legislative committee of the Missouri Sheriff's Association at a meeting of the association last weekend in Kansas City.

In other action, Sheriff J. T. Hull of Morgan County was elected president of the association for the upcoming year.

The association also created the post of full-time executive director and hired Bill E. Duncan, Jefferson City, Mo., formerly an assistant director of the Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council, will coordinate efforts between the sheriffs' association and the state legislature and perform other duties which in the past have been performed by the president of the association, Hull said.

Elderly Residents Killed in Wrecks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Two elderly Missourians died in traffic accidents in the state Tuesday.

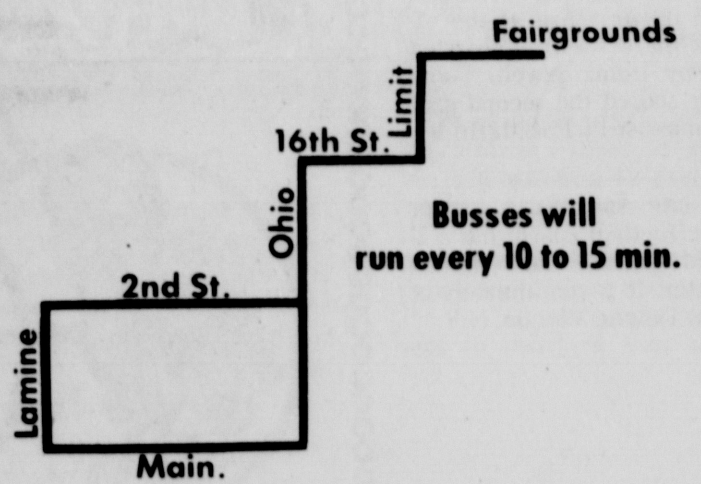

Ervey T. Akins, 76, of Alton, Mo., was fatally injured when his car missed a curve and struck a utility pole on U.S. 160 in West Plains.

A two-car collision 10 miles west of Chillicothe claimed the life of Mrs. Lula Cathey, 72, of Chillicothe and injured two other people.

The highway patrol also reported Tomi Gene Mehrer, 22, of East Prairie, Mo., died Tuesday in a Paducah, Ky., hospital of injuries received Aug. 13 in an accident on Interstate 55 some 15 miles south of Sikeston. The Mehrer car was evidently stopped on the highway when it was struck from behind by another vehicle, the patrol said.

Games Little People Play

The multi-million-dollar toy industry is always coming up with new ideas to capture children's attention. But, somehow, kids seem to have better ideas.

When they're not inventing new ways of amusing themselves, they're tinkering with this or that, taking apart a doll, slicing a hot dog and piling up the pieces into a leaning tower, or chasing a scared frog out of a puddle.

Games little people play are the product of their creative minds — original, exciting and fantastic. The wonderful world of children is woven with fantasy, make-believe and boundless curiosity.

Why else would six-year-old Steven Johnson, 709 West Seventh, do what he did to his toy VW "bug"? Asked why the car was without wheels, he admitted, "I tore 'em up 'cause I wanted to drag it."

"Why drag a car behind a bicycle?" an adult is prone to ask. Steven's simple explanation is "Cause it's fun."

When four-year-old Karen Eichholz, 501 West Broadway, plays "mother," she goes all out to please her dolls — she undresses them and dresses them up so many times, fills the nursing bottle with water and feeds them "milk," and even puts them to bed with the tender, loving care only a lady her age is capable of.

An adult mind may not always understand why children play the games they do. As Oliver Goldsmith, the English poet once said,

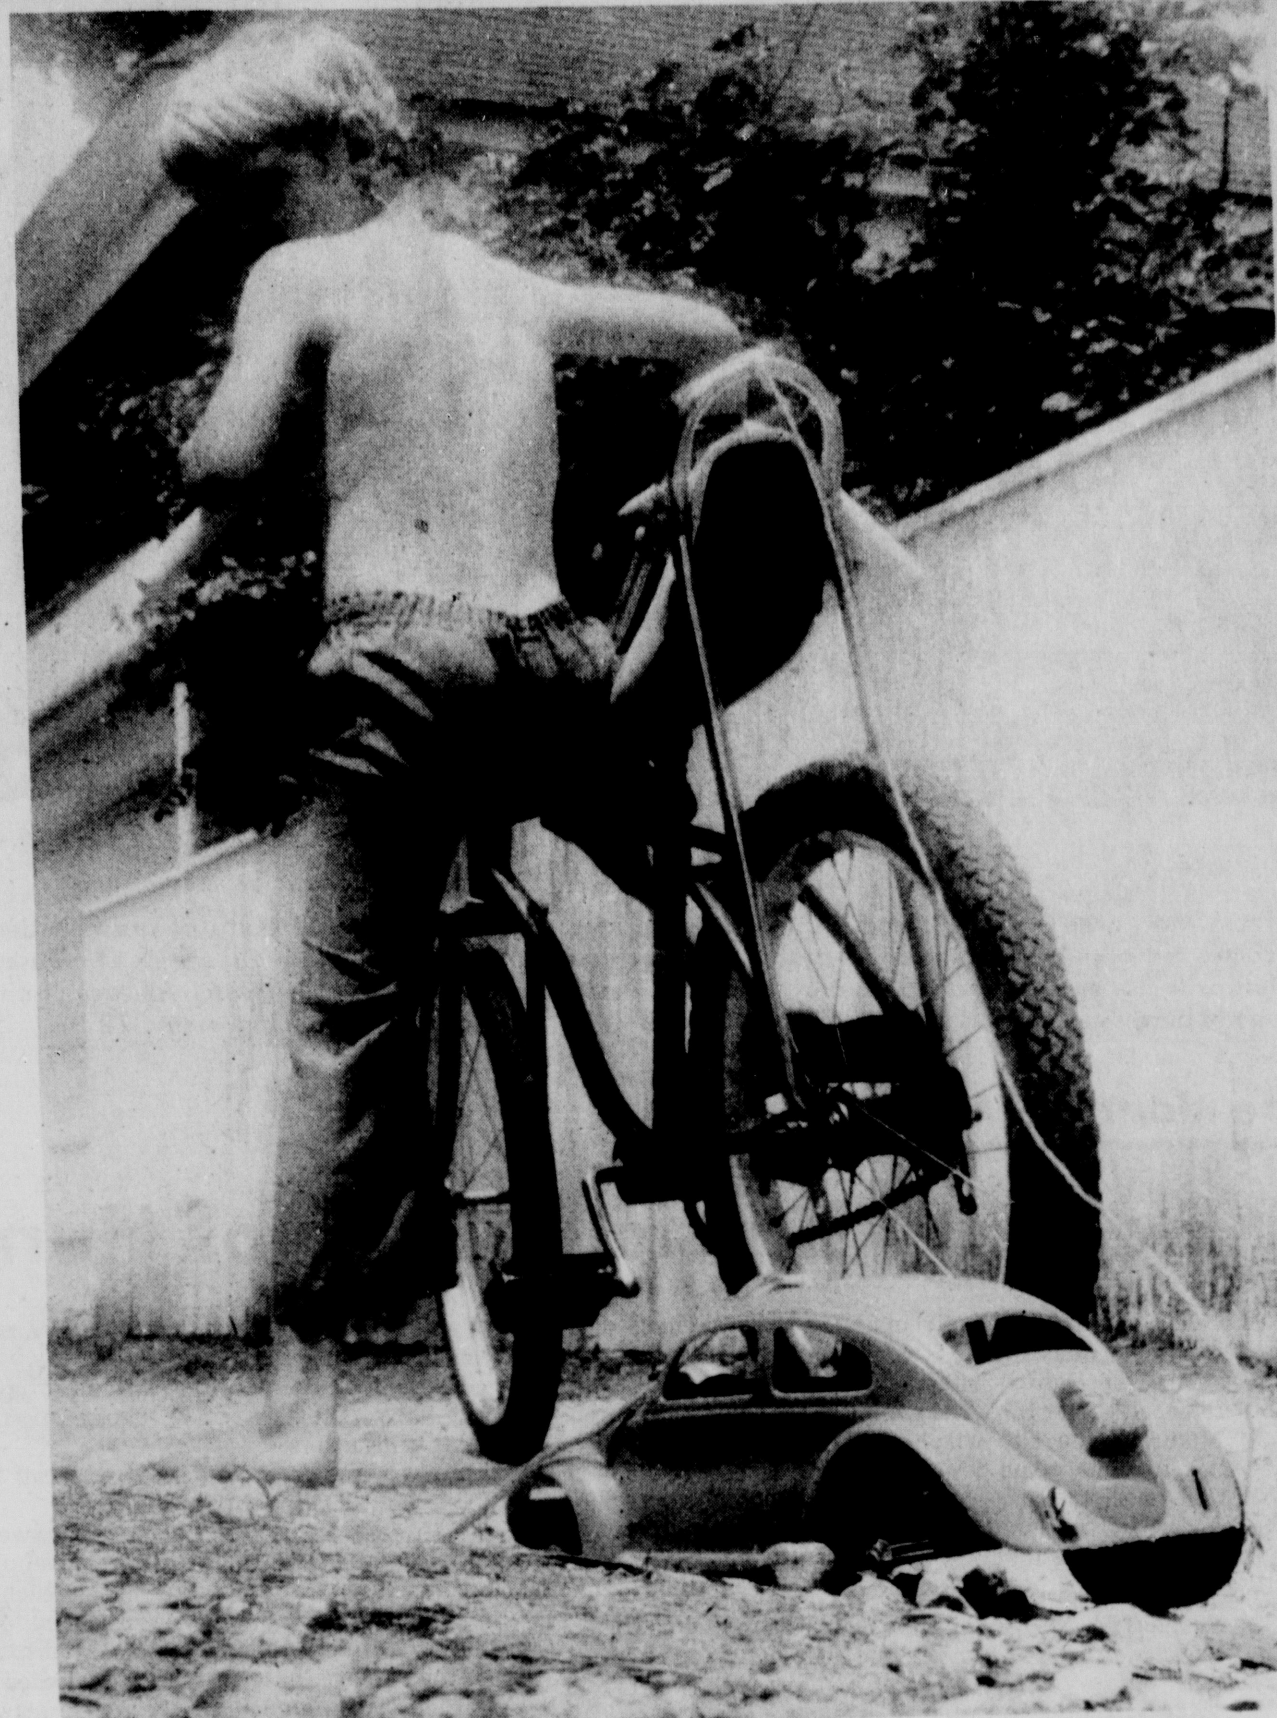

"By sports like these are all their cares beguil'd."

The sports of children satisfy the child."

Engrossed in changing her Barbie doll's dress is four-year-old Karen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garry Eichholz, 501 West Broadway. At left is another doll, whom Karen calls Sally.

The Montreal Mode

Elegant, Classic, A Dash of Humor

MONTREAL — (NEA) — From all the fashion centers of the world — France, Italy, England, Israel, Hong Kong, Canada and the United States — comes one similarity in clothes for fall-winter 1972. The gimmicks are gone.

In Montreal, the city which produces 50 per cent of Canadian fashions, come designs that are sleek of line and beautifully uncluttered — the result of a combination of French design and detail and North American expertise. There is individuality for every consumer — junior, miss and woman.

For women a natural silhouette is achieved with youthful smock jackets, princess line coats and huge batwing sleeves for accent.

Montreal designers showed cropped-to-the-waist jackets that reveal the junior derriere. Pants ride high and are wide and cuffed.

Pleats are everywhere. Pantsuits feature wide front-pleated pants worn with shirts and ties, ascots and pussycat bows. The fabrics for women's coats and suits are chiefly fine tweeds and plaids.

The fuller coat is a Montreal "must" as is the three-part suit — jacket, skirt and pants in complementary or contrasting colors.

Skirts climb from just below the calf to the top of the thigh. And all swing with pleats.

There are mohairs and angoras for sweaters, camel hair for coats and suits and brushed blanket-plaid wools. These herald a return to durability — a fact which indicates that the fashion designers themselves are expected to be an addition to one's wardrobe rather than a seasonal disposable.

Montreal has its own share of talented designers: Hugh Garber of Margo Dress, Pierre Desmarais of Hurricane Harbor, Michel Robichaud (Guy Laroche trained) for Aukie Samit, Robert Bernard for Amoroso, to name just a few. And they all have contributed to the Montreal mode for fall and winter — elegant with a touch of the classic and a dash of humor.

Cutting Cartons Saves on Space

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I suggest that we all keep an old pair of scissors in our kitchens and use them to cut into small pieces all meat, egg and other cartons and boxes that fill up the trash can so quickly. Children old enough to safely use scissors like to do this for a pastime. — MRS. H. R.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — How can I remove stains, such as made by grape juice and artificially colored drinks, from my laminated plastic counter tops without removing the gloss? Can anything restore the shine that previously used cleansers removed from these counters? Thank you for any help. — LOIS

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns the aftermath from festivals, fairs, etc. It seems that people who sponsor these affairs should have some system for cleaning up the debris along the streets. Could they make a deal with the fire department to wash off the streets and sidewalks that smell of discarded food for days? The terrible stench of beer lingers on like a bad dream. — MRS. T. J.

DEAR POLLY — I would like to pass on a hint I have had work well for the past five summers. Before this, I always had trouble getting enough moisture to the flowers in my porch boxes. Now I cut the bottoms from liquid soap bottles invert about one-third of the top part in the soil, fill each bottle with water as need (at least every other day) and about every three weeks or a month I add a little liquid fertilizer to the bottle (as per directions). Before long the foliage makes a cover for the bottles, so all a passerby sees is lush foliage and flowers. I space these bottles about a foot apart in a box. — ANNIE GRACE

DEAR POLLY — I would like to pass on to the reader who wants to remove a kitty smell from her carpet the fact that my husband is a carpet installer and has found that salt works for his customers. It should be applied right after an accident so this would be remembered for future reference. Wet the spot (do not soak) and pour on a liberal amount of salt. When thoroughly dry, remove the salt with the vacuum cleaner. — PAMELA (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Speaking of Pollution Problems

Is This Packaging Necessary?

By HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — From TV panel shows to magazine articles to pleas from government environmental agencies the consumer is bombarded with suggestions on how to handle solid waste.

Solving the pollution problem has necessarily become today's name of the game and it's no longer considered indecate to discuss garbage — even at the dinner table.

Both the government and consultant engineering firms that specialize in waste management say we are literally being buried in a sea of garbage. Each person in the United States generates 5.5 pounds of solid waste a day and New York City alone adds another 25,000 tons a day to the garbage problem.

The ideal way to get rid of garbage would be to separate waste into piles of glass, aluminum cans, tin cans, organic refuse, newspaper, etc. After pick-up by the sanitation department this garbage could be recycled. But that's an unwieldy and, in most cases, a futile method right now.

On a recent television show a lady was displaying how, with a huge magnet, the consumer can tell whether the cans she has just emptied is aluminum or tin so that she knows which garbage sack to use for it. Then she showed how to cut the empty can into strips for easy disposal. This would be a bit time consuming when cooking for a family of six and downright frustrating for the consumer who lives in a large apartment building and would have to watch her efforts to clean up the environment go down the incinerator — all properly divided — knowing it would land in a mess at the bottom. With no little man with a notebook to check off "tin, aluminum, organic and so on." It would seem that cooking fresh vegetables or soup, washing out the pot and putting it back on the shelf would at least simplify the problem to some extent. At least you would frequently have to use only the sack labeled "organic."

Someone may think of that yet.

But one way the consumer can push for garbage control is to tackle the ridiculous overpackaging disease that so many manufacturers are suffering from today.

Take a simple electric plug. Remember when the man at the hardware store reached into a drawer and handed you a plug? Now the plug comes in a plastic bubble mounted on a piece of cardboard five times the size of the plug. The bubble and the cardboard are totally unnecessary and garbage-creating as well.

The cosmetic industry is a great offender in this area. Why in the world is a simple eyebrow pencil, for example, packaged in a manner not unlike the electric plug? If you're away from home where you don't have the proper cutting tools to open the package you're apt to lose two fingernails in the process.

Michael Pope, president of a consulting engineering firm (Pope, Evans and Robbins) that specializes in federal, state and municipal studies in the area of pollution abatement says that shoppers can do the most good right in their own neighborhood stores.

"I've noticed that many people have begun to take action at the checkout counter by leaving a lot of their unnecessary wrappings in the stores," he said. "If enough people do this the packaging will add to the stores' own waste disposal problems. A number of large grocery chains are now studying the problem to see if overpackaging is necessary."

Pope said he has traveled around the world several times studying the garbage problem. And has found that nowhere does overpackaging create the problems it does here.

In other parts of the world housewives shop with their own baskets or reusable bags to carry home purchases. In Europe only about 50 per cent of the food and clothes you buy is wrapped as it is here. It's rare in other parts of the world that a shopper gets fruit, vegetables, meat and bread prepackaged. Also string saving, frowned upon here, is still practiced there.

"When I bring home a gift for someone," he said, the first thing they do is throw away the box, tissue and string. In other countries they probably wouldn't have a box but if they did, it would be saved and used again and again. The same with the tissue and string."

The problems of solid waste are local but the solutions are regional. Pope advocates community action groups to get their local government to work with other local governments to find solutions to the garbage problem.

"Recycling is possible," he pointed out, "but you need the economy of size to make recycling programs profitable and in order to do this you need many communities working together to deliver a steady source of material."

And while the local governments get together to solve the big problems, we can do our best with the overpackaging. Write the manufacturers and tell them you like their products fine but you would like them just as well if they came in informal attire instead of in fancy dress.

"We're running out of landfill sites in the big cities," Pope said. "We're in a garbage trouble now and unless something is done soon today's problem will seem like a trifle as compared to the horrendous heritage we will leave our children."

Helping to abate pollution is an act everyone can get into—and must.

Encourages Woman To Marry Cripple

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a woman who was considering marriage to a man who had suffered a stroke and was partially paralyzed. She expressed concern about his ability to function sexually. I hope she sees this letter because I speak from experience.

Four years ago when my husband was stricken I was sure our sex life was over. Our physician suggested therapy at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago. At the time it seemed hopeless but we went anyway. Within months he showed remarkable progress and now I can tell you that his recovery has been miraculous. Today he is a completely satisfying lover.

Please encourage that woman to marry and if she is lucky enough to live in or near Chicago, to take him to that wonderful hospital. — Been There

Dear Been: I do so with pleasure. The Rehabilitation Institute is one of the finest in the world. The director, Dr. Henry Betts, is a good friend of mine. Your letter provides me with the opportunity to say a good word for an institution that richly deserves it.

Dear Ann Landers: You told "Getting It All Together" that when a love affair is over the best way to recover is to put away the pictures, letters and mementos, move forward and not look back. I lost someone I loved very much and I can't get over it. He died. And he was just 18. The only comfort I have is looking at his picture, re-reading his letters and poetry, playing our favorite records and reliving, in my memory, the wonderful times we had together. These things help me feel closer to him.

It's been only a month but I

Official Discusses Tourism

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has warned countries seeking to build up their tourist business that they will kill it instead if they give developers free rein.

"A major threat to the development, maintenance, protection and survival of tourist attractions is tourism itself," he says in a report on the subject.

"This is especially true when the unplanned spontaneous development of tourist facilities and activities surpasses the capacity of the environment to accommodate visitors and inflicts irreversible damage on it."

"Overcrowding, high-density development, and the mushrooming of hotels and other tourist-related structures resulting from unplanned development at many famous resorts around the world, not only damage the landscape but isolate tourists from any direct contact with the natural environment."

The report brings out that between 1958 and 1970, international tourist arrivals rose from 55.3 million people to 168 million a year and tourist receipts grew from $5.4 billion to $17.4 billion a year.

Developing countries get about a fifth of the world's tourist business, it says, and Mexico, Yugoslavia, Argentina and Morocco account for half of the developing countries' share.

wonder if it will ever be any different. People have assured me that time will ease the pain and that one day I'll be happy again. But how does one get through the present? Broken love affairs are often repaired. People get back together again. But in my case it will never happen. He is lost to me forever. The finality of it all has crushed my spirit. Please give me some words of wisdom. I am — Empty, Empty, Empty.

Dear Friend: When a love affair is over, the prescription is the same, whether the separation was caused by a misunderstanding, mutual agreement, or death. Look ahead, make a new life — and accept the realities.

A month is not very long. The wounds are still fresh, but you will not help them heal by keeping them open and dwelling on the pain. Consider your dream castle a delightful place to visit, but don't try to live in it. Life is for the living.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for

"Denver Housewife." Welcome aboard the Ship of Fools. We also live in a state where tourists love to vacation. These past three summers we have spent $4,000 entertaining people in our home and taking them to places we wouldn't have gone ourselves.

Our generosity has not brought us any pleasure. We now know that giving means nothing unless it is done intelligently. Foolish generosity is neither rewarding nor is it appreciated. People expect you to continue to give. When they are refused, they forget the past and are bitterly disappointed.

We've had to tell three families we can't entertain them this summer and they are all mad at us. Does it pay to be nice? — S.S.S.

Dear S.S.S.: Your problem is that you have second-rate friends — the "what-have-you-done-for-me-lately" variety. Well — you've at least learned. Congratulations.

Farm Roundup

Pasture Condition
Said Above Average

By DON KENDALL
Ap Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pastures and ranges nationally were in above-average shape on Aug. 1, but livestock producers and dairymen who rely on hay for winter feeding can expect smaller supplies and higher prices.

The Agriculture Department says grazing conditions averaged 81 per cent on Aug. 1, down seasonally by one point from July but four above last year and three points higher than the 10-year average.

But 1972 production of all types of hay was forecast at 127.8 million tons, down 2 per cent from last year's record of 131.0 million.

Alfalfa and alfalfa mixtures were estimated at 76.1 million tons, down slightly from last year, but other types will be down 5 per cent to around 51.7 million, the department said.

Further, says USDA, hay quality has been lower in some major producing areas, including the Northeast dairy region where excessive moisture was a factor in early cuttings.

Industry sources say the hay situation has become critical in some parts of the Northeast where many producers report hay supplies reduced sharply.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest communique from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to state offices is devoted to 1972 farm-income prospects and U.S. agricultural exports.

The report, called "Excerpts," was filed last Friday by ASCS with state executive directors and information coordinators.

"The material may be used in appropriate information activities, such as speeches and newsletters, and may provide background or ideas for press releases or radio-TV broadcasts," the state officials were told.

The current "Excerpts"—one of a series—says net farm income this year is expected to be a record, mainly because of improved livestock prices paid to producers.

Executions Foster One Man's Desire To Put An End To All Barbarism

EDITOR'S NOTE—"He that smiteth a man so that he die shall be surely put to death." Maybe, says the Supreme Court. But the death penalty as administered in this country is unlawful. Don Reid, who has watched 189 men die in the electric chair, goes further. He prays for an end to barbarism.

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The dull green door swung open on heavy metal hinges and a gentle man with a round face and warm hazel eyes stepped into the small, familiar room.

"Do you have anything to say, Don?" the warden asked softly.

"No, of course not."

"Then have a seat, please."

The warden gestured without emotion toward the stark oak chair with its thick leather straps and its electrodes at the left leg and at the top of its perfectly straight back.

The man with the warm eyes scanned the faces in the windowless room. He recognized them all: warden, chaplain, doctor, guards.

"What are you doing, warden?" he said. "You know me. I'm Don Reid. We've known each other for years. Haven't we always been friends? Why don't you stop this?"

"I'm sorry, Don. You know there is nothing I can do. You're next."

At that moment Don Reid found himself standing beside his bed, bathed in sweat, trembling, screaming hysterically. At length his wife calmed him, reassured him, as though he were a child. But it was only a dream. But he did not go back to sleep.

Memories of that awful nightmare have stayed with Don Reid the past 15 years, lodged side by side in his mind with memories of the long, ornate parade of men he has watched die in that hideous chair by official order of the State of Texas and the polite invitation of the warden to have a seat, please.

Don Reid has witnessed that ultimate act of punishment—he calls it vengeance—no fewer than 189 times.

It has not been ghoulish curiosity, nor any other reason except a sense of obligation, that has drawn Reid so many times to the death chamber at the Texas State Penitentiary at Huntsville.

"Since the Supreme Court ruling on capital punishment I think I've seen my last execution," he said, adding "at least I hope to God I have."

The Supreme Court June 29 ruled 5-4 that the death penalty as it now is administered in the United States is unlawful. Only three of the justices in the majority seemed to hold, however, that it was unconstitutional because it was of its nature a cruel and unusual form of punishment. The other two found it to be cruel and unusual only because, in the words of one justice, it is now "so wantonly and so freakishly imposed."

The dissenting justices, for their part, felt generally that to retain or abolish capital punishment was a decision the people ought to make through their legislatures, not the courts.

The ruling thus left the way open for states to continue to impose death as a penalty for crime, presumably if they can write new laws that would apply it without caprice. Already the attorneys general of Texas and two other states have petitioned the court to reconsider its ruling on grounds that it encourages legislatures to make the death sentence mandatory for certain crimes—a practice abandoned a century ago—as perhaps the only alternative.

"Another obvious alternative is simply to abolish the death penalty altogether," Don Reid said.

"What the court has done is a fine first step. But I myself won't be satisfied until I personally get hold of that chair and saw it up into little pieces—at my age I'm better with a saw than an axe—and put it in a fire piece by piece."

Don Reid is 65. He came to Huntsville in 1937 as editor of the weekly (now twice-weekly) Huntsville Item and in that capacity, as the official representative of the public, has witnessed nearly every execution since then. The last was July 30, 1964.

"When I took the job in Huntsville it never occurred to me that I would have to cover the death house," Reid said. "Then one day the Associated Press man in Dallas phoned and said he expected a story."

"I was terrified at the thought of it. I went on over there and stood in the room and watched them bring the prisoner in. He was a black man. When the warden asked him if he had anything to say, he fell to his knees and sang the most beautiful spiritual I ever heard."

"After it was over I went back to my room and paced back and forth. I threw open all the windows but I still couldn't get the smell out of my nostrils. I couldn't sleep. I felt plain sick."

"Obviously it bothered me, watching the state snuff out a man's life. But I rationalized. I convinced myself these people were the scum of the earth or they wouldn't have been sentenced to death. That they had had a fair trial, this was their lawful penalty, and I couldn't change it even if I wanted to—but I don't think I particularly wanted to."

"With each succeeding execution I steeled myself beforehand. I'd say 'Aw, hell, Don, he deserves it. Watch it, report it, forget it.'"

"But I discovered I couldn't forget it. The thought would nag at me. I know now that even then it had become a matter of conscience, because I wouldn't allow myself to think beyond: this is the law, it must be right."

After that first execution Don Reid had said to himself, "Lord, I hope I don't have to watch many of these." No such luck. In 1938 Texas put 18 men to death, in 1939 a dozen more, and by the time Reid entered the Air Force in 1942 he had witnessed more than 50 executions.

Global warfare actually provided sweet relief for Reid. For one thing, he never saw a man die. For another, he met his wife, Frances Hawkes, of Andover, Mass.

"Want to know something ironic?" Reid said. "Frances is a descendant of a woman who was burned as a witch in Salem. I guess the old girl just didn't have enough money. That's the way it is today, you know: when the money runs out the switch gets pulled."

Always? "In at least the 189 cases that I know of. Only three or four of those men had enough money to hire a good lawyer in the first place, to defend them at their trials."

"Among the rest, I know of families who mortgaged their homes, gave up all they had to hire a lawyer to prepare another brief to present to another judge to buy another 30 days of life. The process of claiming to have new evidence can go on indefinitely: the money supply can't."

The Empty Chair

Don Reid stands in the death chamber of the Texas State Penitentiary at Huntsville in the position from which he officially watched 189 men die in the heavy oak electric chair. Since the recent Supreme Court ruling on capital punishment he thinks he's seen his last execution. "But I myself won't be satisfied until I personally get hold of that chair and saw it into little pieces." (AP)

Don Reid's own efforts saved at least two men from the chair.

"They were men who were simply inadequately defended at their trials," he said. "I talked to them while they were on death row and it seemed to me they were telling the truth."

The first was a man convicted of killing a woman. He filled Reid in on details that didn't come out at the trial. Reid located the jury foreman and the judge, who had the man's claims investigated. The man now is free.

The second was a black man convicted of stabbing to death a white used-car salesman. What Reid discovered, which hadn't emerged at the trial, was that the salesman had been drunk and had menaced the black man. That man, too, is now free.

Reid's personal interest in the lives of Huntsville's doomed men, as opposed to his journalistic interest in their deaths, began, not coincidentally, with his discovery that he was an undisguisable foe of capital punishment. Like Saul of Tarsus, he knew the exact moment

It was July 16, 1949, the day a 19-year-old youth named Buster Northern was executed. Northern had kicked to death an elderly Dallas grandmother in order to rob her of $12.

Again, the wire service man in Dallas had asked Reid to do something he had never done: interview a man on death row. Reid obtained the warden's permission and talked to Buster Northern.

"He told me that he was one of six brothers, five of whom, as well as their father, had spent time in jail. He said that all he had ever known was stealing and violence but that he realized now, as he approached 20, how evil his life had been. He said he was fully prepared to pay for his crime."

That night the Dallas policeman who had arrested Buster showed up to watch the execution I mentioned to him what a shame I thought it was that Buster had been taught no worthwhile values while he was growing up or he might not have wound up like this.

"He said, 'That's what you think. I know the punk. He's no good, and it will be a pleasure to watch him die.'"

"When they brought Buster in and the warden asked if he had anything to say, Buster thanked everyone there, including the policeman, then got down on his knees and recited the Lord's Prayer."

"On my way to the telephone after it was over I saw the policeman sitting on a bench in the prison yard with his face buried in his hands. I sat down and put my arm around him. He turned to me and said through his tears, 'What have we solved?'"

"I said, 'I know. I know, there has to be a better way.'"

The way it was then—and might be again, depending on the ingenuity of state legislatures—was quite uncomplicated.

On a recent visit to death row Don Reid explained the procedure. Death row is empty now, its 46 inhabitants, at least temporarily relieved, having been moved elsewhere.

"Time goes swiftly on the day of an execution," Reid said.

"At about 5 p.m. he eats his last meal, whatever he wants, and about 9:30 p.m. the assistant warden reads his death warrant to him, the court order to put him to death 'before the hour of sunrise' the next day."

"The prisoner is given a shower and the prison barber shaves the top of his head, like a monk, and he puts on his burial clothes—a clean khaki shirt, a short jacket, khaki pants with the left leg slit to the knee."

"The warden and the other officials are already in here. The executioner is in this room back there, behind the chair. He can see through that little window. It has one-way glass."

"At midnight the warden taps on the door, from the inside, and the guards and chaplain come in with the prisoner."

"The warden addresses him by his first name and asks if he has anything to say. Some do, some don't. Then the warden says, 'Have a seat, please.' He doesn't say it facetiously. When you think about it, there really isn't any appropriate way to tell somebody to sit in an electric chair."

"The guards strap him in very quickly."

"The generator starts with a whine. A guard signals the executioner. He throws the switch. The man's blood boils and you hear a thud and see the body lift and strain against the straps. Then the body slumps to a relaxed position. Then they do it again. The doctor opens the man's shirt and listens though a stethoscope and says, 'I declare this man legally dead.'"

"What do you do when the switch is thrown, Don?" "I watch. That's my job. And I pray."

Reid estimates that the whole process, from the time the prisoner enters the chamber until he is wheeled out, takes about six minutes. That means Reid has spent some 19 hours watching men die.

Ever since the night in 1949 when Buster Northern went to his death Reid knew what his role would be. He began speaking before civic groups and service clubs and later helped organize a state Committee to Abolish Capital Punishment and served as its first secretary. In that capacity he testified before a legislative committee.

He began spending more and more time with condemned prisoners. He wrote letters for them, contacted relatives, visited them.

These activities in turn led to an abiding interest in the full range of crime and punishment. Once a month he takes time off to counsel handicapped prisoners who are scheduled to be released and is constantly helping arrange jobs for others getting out.

In Reid's view even those who profess to favor the death penalty are ambivalent about it: he has yet to find a person who would be willing to pull the switch.

"That's not sophistry," he said, "it's the fundamental question. The most logical answer to it I ever heard came from a farmer in this county. Rufus Walker, who was being questioned as a prospective juror in a murder trial."

"When they asked him whether if he found the accused guilty of murder he could vote the death penalty, Rufus answered 'I suppose I could if I'd seen him do it.'"

No need for state to follow pattern

Increasing numbers of Missouri women appear to be getting abortions in other states where laws are more liberal, the Missouri Division of Health has reported.

In fact, the growing use by Missouri women of legal abortion privileges in Kansas and New York is a significant factor in Missouri's declining birth rate, says Dr. Herbert R. Domke, state health director.

Dr. Domke quotes statistics showing that 2,400 Missouri women obtained legal abortions in Kansas last year, and only slightly fewer traveled to New York for the same purpose. Figures so far this year are much higher.

Women seeking abortions for non-therapeutic reasons must go out of the state because Missouri's law prohibits abortions except when the life of the mother is endangered. Several states, including Kansas and New York, now permit virtual abortion-on-demand. In New York a woman can legally be aborted up to her 24th week of pregnancy.

It might well be just a matter of time before the cry is again heard to liberalize Missouri's laws in view of the increasing number of women — and dollars — flowing out of the state to abortion-liberal states. But we hope that the General Assembly will again stand firm, and refuse to buckle to the pressures.

It's not that we're alarmed so much at Missouri's dropping birth rate; certainly the bloom is off the idea that sheer growth, per se, is all to the good. But rather we are concerned that abortion with no questions asked is being increasingly viewed as an acceptable way of achieving this end.

Earlier this year, the New York legislature, in its repugnance over the state's growing reputation as the nation's abortion capital, threw out its liberal statute permitting non-therapeutic abortions. Only Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's veto kept it on the books.

We see no reason why Missouri should embark upon a permissive approach to abortion, something that even mod, free-swinging New York has found it doesn't have the stomach for.

Red threat is growing in Thailand

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The word from contacts in Bangkok is that the situation in Thailand is gradually deteriorating. The military government is indecisive in action. The Communist underground sponsored by Peking and Hanoi grows very slowly but steadily and is now taking hesitant root in central Thailand as well as in the far north, northeast and southwest.

The outlook is not serious for this year. But it can be said with certainty that men high in the Nixon administration are privately predicting that if the Communist underground continues to grow at the present rate we will see in Thailand within four and a half to five years a full blown insurgency

Merry-go-round

No worries face high rank thieves

BY JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The armed forces follow a double standard of justice in dealing with shoplifters. The punishment, apparently, depends upon their rank.

We have obtained dozens of arrest records which accuse high-ranking officers of filching petty items from military PXs. We selected 23 of these cases for spot investigations.

We found only one retired lieutenant colonel who had been hauled into court. Five others were chewed out by their superiors. The remaining 17 were "exonerated," or the charges were quietly dropped.

In contrast, enlisted men caught shoplifting usually faced formal charges. Related one inspector: "When officers are picked up for shoplifting, they are simply released. When enlisted men are stopped, they are turned over to the MPs, sent to general court and convicted for petty larceny."

The inspector who complained about this discrimination, incidentally, was harassed. Another security officer, who urged that high-ranking thievery be investigated instead of covered up, was fired.

Typical was the case of Col. Robert P. Gould, who was accused of pocketing a $4.75 eight-track tape cassette of "The Partridge Family Sound Magazine" last Christmas eve from the PX at Andrews Air Force Base.

The arrest records indicate that a benevolent security inspector tried to signal Gould "in the hopes he would pay for the tape." But the colonel missed his cue.

Once outside, the inspector was obliged to stop Gould, who denied that he had snatched the $4.75 item. He explained that he had left the tape inside the PX and offered to re-enter the store to prove it.

Inside, according to the arrest record, Gould "bent over to show me where it was, and I observed him taking the tape from underneath his coat and placing it on the shelf and saying, 'Here it is, right here.'"

The accused colonel, who heads an air-to-air missile program for the Air Force, denied he had lifted the tape. Subsequently, his superiors "totally exonerated" him of all charges.

Other brass hats, accused of light-fingered thefts, received similar soft treatment. Their reactions to our inquiries, in a few cases, are worth recording:

✓ A retired Army general, caught swindling the Fort Myer, Va., PX of a 29-cent roll of splicing tape on July 7, first denied stealing the merchandise, then said he couldn't recollect "for sure" whether he had pocketed it. The Army, of course, gave him the benefit of the doubt.

✓ A discomfited Air Force major was so embarrassed when he purchased a package of prophylactics from a female cashier, he explained to us, that he "completely forgot" to pay for two boxes of cigars.

✓ The wife of a retired rear admiral, asked by my reporter Mark McIntyre about pinching a 95-cent bottle of Visine Eye Drops, threatened: "If you want to blow this up, you're going to get into a lot of trouble."

✓ And when we tried to inquire about an Air Force colonel, who walked out of the Bolling Air Force Base PX without paying for three fishing lures, we were told he wasn't available for comment because he was "out fishing."

Black Box — Admiral Thomas Moorer, the Joint Chiefs chairman, was touring the links the other afternoon in a golf cart. He hauled along not only his clubs but an ominous black box that goes wherever Moorer goes. The box contains a security phone which enables the chairman to talk with U.S. installations around the world. In the midst of his golf game, Moorer placed an urgent call. But it wasn't to Saigon or some other trouble spot. He called his wife to tell her that he'd be home in 20 minutes.

Pampered Admiral — Vice Admiral G. E. Miller, commander of the vaunted Sixth Fleet, is properly pampered by his executive officer. The solicitous exec, Cmdr. W. T. Crawford, issued a stern order aboard the admiral's flagship, the USS Springfield. "To avoid establishing a pattern of having emergency in-port drills at a set time," directed the order, "and further to avoid inconvenience to the admiral, all emergency drills are to be held at random times after the admiral and chief of staff have departed for the day." A Navy spokesman said the admiral was unaware of the order and cancelled it after we called.

Military Glorification — The Defense Department publishes 366 different magazines and newspapers each year ostensibly to boost troop morale. In reality, however, the principle aim is to glorify the brass. In the first four issues of the new magazine, "The Engineer," for example, more than 40 pages are devoted to interviews or stories about the generals in the Army Corps of Engineers.

Gift is the key to votes

WASHINGTON — When the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced that it was guaranteeing a $14 million bond issue for Floyd McKissick's "Soul City" project, the next development was as predictable as sin following temptation.

McKissick would soon be out hustling votes for the re-election of Richard M. Nixon.

When Mr. Nixon let ex-Teamsters Union boss Jimmy Hoffa out of prison, the fallout was a foregone conclusion.

The Teamsters would wind up backing Mr. Nixon for a new term in the Presidency.

When entertainers like Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr., begin to be harassed about alleged ties to organized crime, count on them to throw their weight on the side of the politicians who have the most power to help them or hurt them.

It is all part of the oldest game in politics: once you get power you use it. You use Uncle Sam's bankroll, and the authority to jail people or to hold off indictments, to win enough friends and influence enough people to extend your tenure in office.

The Democrats almost always have been pretty good at this game. I recall an intimate gathering of President Lyndon B. Johnson with a few advisers, discussing potential appointees to fairly high-level jobs. When someone offered a name for a choice post, one Johnson aide objected: "But he's not a Democrat!"

"Give him the job," Johnson rasped, "and he soon will be."

Nixon and HUD secretary George Romney stole a page from the Johnson playbook when they guaranteed McKissick's bonds. This black man who used to style himself a super-militant could not possibly be regarded as a Republican. But put $14 million worth of "black capitalism" within his grasp and he'll call Spiro Agnew godfather.

McKissick is just one example of what may turn out to be a remarkably shrewd Republican campaign to use governmental purse and power to make inroads within groups that traditionally have formed the Democratic victory forces.

The GOP is funneling some pretty big money into the hands of black businessmen these days. Some of it is recorded governmental action, through the Small Business Administration and the Office of Minority Business Enterprise. Or it may be an above-board operation of placing governmental money into black banks. Republicans call this "giving blacks a piece of the action."

Then a few key black businessmen are being handed tidy sums by the Committee to Re-elect the President in response to the promises of these businessmen that they can corral a lot of black votes.

There is talk all around that these businessmen, and a group calling itself "The Black Silent Majority," can deliver 20 to 25 percent of Negro votes to Mr. Nixon.

Should they succeed, the Democrats can forget about the White House, because McGovern cannot win New York, Ohio, Illinois or California unless he gets the 90-per-cent-plus black vote that Humphrey got in 1968.

The best bet is that while the Nixon forces can cause strong erosions of traditional Democratic support among laborers, or Jews, or other urban ethnic concentrations, they are doomed to disappointment regarding blacks.

Those blacks trying to deliver votes to Nixon have been characterized by Julian Bond, the young Georgia state legislator, as "new political prostitutes" who want to "deliver lambs to slaughter." The names hurled at Republican blacks will get nastier as the campaign intensifies.

The black masses are likely to believe Bond rather than black businessmen who are demonstrably on the take from the Administration.

That, in fact, illustrates a remarkable difference in the Democratic and the Republican approaches to winning black votes.

Both parties are cynical to a degree. The Democrats have always picked the politically-propitious moment to name a black to a major, or unprecedented, governmental post. They have picked election years to champion laws and programs that ostensibly would benefit the great mass of blacks. They got results at the polls.

But the Republicans cling to the "trickle down" theory. They think that if they fatten McKissick's wallet, 23 million blacks will express gratitude. This gratitude is supposed to be so deep that blacks will forget the Administration proposals regarding busing, welfare and other matters that are clearly inimical to black equality. If that approach to blacks pays off at the polls, then blacks are too dumb to deserve freedom.

In its appeal to all the other traditionally Democratic groups, the Nixon administration has made genuine efforts to win friends on a mass basis. With his strong support for Israel, Mr. Nixon has taken steps to ingratiate himself with the mass of Jews. He could reap handsome electoral dividends in New York, Illinois, California.

As for laborers, the President has taken off governmental pressures that had a lot of unionists fearing, four years ago, that the minorities were going to be given a big share of their goodies.

Initial Goals Appear in Reach of Nixon's Economic Plan

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after President Nixon stunned the nation by freezing wages, prices and rents for 90 days, his broad economic program appears to be on the road to reaching at least its 1972 goals.

But the first anniversary of Nixon's dramatic economic moves last Aug. 15 finds even his closest economic advisers wary and uncertain about the future.

Although they are pleased with the economy's recent performance, including a slower inflation rate and dropping unemployment, they say the battle is not over.

They think the Nixon administration will achieve its targets of reducing unemployment to the range of 5 per cent and cutting inflation to the range of 2 to 3 per cent by the end of the year.

But next year is another question, they say, and it may be critical one for the nation's economy.

"With big labor negotiations coming up and with the economy operating much closer to potential, 1973 will be a year of decision," said Dr. Herbert Stein, chairman of Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers.

The administration is now pondering some of the tough questions: When and how can Nixon's wage-price control system be safely lifted? How can the sharp rise in food prices be halted? If the federal budget gets out of hand, can the wage-price control system stand new inflationary pressures? Can the jobless rate be brought down to 4 per cent, or "full employment?"

One of the big challenges facing the program is the continued sharp rise in wholesale prices, which may be passed on to consumers. In July, wholesale prices rose 0.7 per cent. In the eight months before the freeze, the wholesale price index increased 5.2 per cent but in the eight months after the freeze, it has advanced more sharply, by 5.7 per cent.

For now, anyway, the administration is basking in the successes of the Phase 2 economic program. Recent consumer price and job indicators have shown definite improvement. The dollar has survived so far under overseas pressure. Profits are booming. Real earnings of workers are up.

Richard Nixon enters the opening round of the 1972 presidential race with some glowing economic reports on his side. In the second quarter of the year, for instance, the economy grew at a healthy 8.9 per cent rate, while the rate of inflation dropped to 2.1 per cent.

A year ago, it wasn't that way. The inflation rate was showing signs of accelerating. In the three months before the freeze, the Consumer Price Index advanced at an annual rate of 4.8 per cent. The unemployment rate remained at a seemingly intractable 6 per cent.

In Europe, the dollar was in deep trouble. A new wave of speculation in currencies threatened to erupt. The years of large U.S. balance-of-payments deficits had finally caught up with the nation.

With a surplus of about 550 billion overseas, foreign central banks weren't anxious to take in more dollars to maintain the dollar's historic relationship to gold at $35 an ounce. But they had to take in dollars to maintain the value of their own currencies.

One alternative would have been to cash in their dollars for gold. But the United States had only about 510 billion in gold. If all countries had lined up at the Treasury, the gold stock would soon be depleted and the country would be broke in terms of reserve assets.

Nixon decided to suspend convertibility into gold, a move cutting the dollar loose from its fixed rate of exchange with other currencies.

"If you are going to close the gold window, you couldn't just fuss around," Stein said in recalling that action. "You had to take decisive action" on the domestic front.

Nixon's abandonment of his opposition to wage-price controls wasn't all that hasty. Faced with a midsummer bout of high inflation and joblessness, he decided in principle to take bold action several weeks before the announcement, insiders say.

The secret was well kept. Only then Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally, Budget Director George P. Shultz, Paul McCracken, then chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and maybe a few others knew.

Stein said he had an inkling of what was going on about 10 days before Nixon acted when the entire council met with the President. It was then that McCracken was given the assignment of studying in detail a wage-price freeze and a wage-price review board.

"He (Nixon) indicated that if he moved, he intended to leapfrog the argument. He would do something very strong," Stein said.

The secret had to be kept because if any word got out, people would start trying to beat it by raising wages and prices, Stein said, adding: "We were aided by the fact that nobody would have believed it."

On Friday, Aug. 13, Nixon summoned all his top economic advisers to Camp David, Md., for a weekend of work. It was there the details of the new economic program were hashed out.

On Sunday night, Aug. 15, Nixon went on nationwide television to announce the freeze and suspension of the convertibility of the dollar into gold. He put a temporary 10 per cent surcharge on imports.

To spur the economy, he asked Congress to give industry an accelerated investment tax credit of 10 per cent for one year and 5 per cent after that, to remove the 7 per cent automobile excise tax, and increase personal tax exemptions—a program that Congress modified and adopted later.

The next day, the government was flooded with inquiries. Connally, named to head the Cost of Living Council that would administer the freeze, went on television to give a few details: There would be a few exemptions from the freeze, he said.

The small Office of Emergency Preparedness was originally set up to handle enforcement, but eventually those duties were given to the Internal Revenue Service. Compliance depended heavily on voluntary action by Americans.

"The freeze gave us time to set up Phase 2," Stein said in assessing its impact. "I think it changed psychology in the country."

The administration wanted to avoid the Korean War experience in which Congress debated wage-price controls for several months, he said. By the time it acted, wages and prices had skyrocketed.

As Nixon huddled with his advisers at Camp David, they also talked in broad terms of "Stage 2" as it was known then. "Nobody thought it would be as comprehensive and mandatory as it turned out to be," Stein said, adding the advisers were originally thinking about voluntary wage-price guidelines to follow the freeze.

Marvin Kosters, an economist who worked with the Cost of Living Council, said Phase 2 had to be flexible "to avoid waste, distortion and inefficiency" that might be true with tighter controls.

"Our mandate was to reach the goals, do it without chilling the expansion, and get out," said Dick Cheney, director of operations for the council.

The shape of Phase 2 became known more than a month before it went into effect as a seven-member Price Commission, a Pay Board composed of five members each from labor, business and the public, and the Cost of Living Council continuing as overseer.

The Internal Revenue Service was assigned to handle enforcement, depending heavily on voluntary compliance.

The largest economic units in the nation—big labor and big business—were required to clear all wage and price increases with the government in advance. There were two other tiers, with the second largest group of companies having to submit quarterly reports. The small "mom and pop" stores had to follow the guidelines, but make no reports.

The Pay Board set a 5.5 per cent standard to cover wage increases. The Price Commission's rules were more complicated.

Basically, higher prices were to be allowed only if they could be justified by allowable costs. And the administration put a restraint on profit margins, to organized labor's surprise.

The commission said the profit margin of a firm could not exceed its "base period" level—the average of the best two of the last three fiscal years.

Nixon weathered his first crisis when AFL-CIO President George Meany, who heavily criticized the freeze, finally agreed to serve on the board after receiving assurances that the Cost of Living Council would not veto the board's actions.

Five months after Phase 2 started on Nov. 14, Meany walked off the board, taking four of the five union members with him. The veteran labor leader said the board offered labor "no hope for fairness, equity or justice." Frank E. Fitzsimmons, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, remained on the board.

Nixon then reconstituted the board, retaining the five public members and only one of the five business members.

But perhaps the worst crisis was the post-freeze bulge of inflation. The administration had expected prices to rise temporarily after the freeze ended Nov. 13, but no one had thought the bulge would last until Easter.

"When the bulge didn't seem to go away... we began to worry," Stein said. That worry eased when consumer prices showed no increase, seasonally adjusted, in March, a report that was released in April.

The most recent figures on the cost of living show that consumer prices have risen at an annual rate of 2.9 per cent in the first six months of the year. In the six months before the freeze, they rose at a rate of 4 per cent.

Stein said it is clear that inflation, when viewed over a period of months, had been subsiding in the summer of 1971 from the high rates of 1970. But he said the administration couldn't take the risk that the old economic policies would bring the rate down further.

He said that if the Democratic-controlled Congress continues to add to the federal deficit this year, causing an overheated economy, Phase 2 might "blow up" next year because of widespread noncompliance.

Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council, said that probably the most difficult time for Phase 2 came early in the year when businessmen began expressing concern about the impact of controls on their profits and the economic recovery.

"The economic numbers were good, but yet there was all this talk," he said.

The administration countered with speechmaking, and the uncertainty appeared to wane with announcement of first-quarter profit reports.

While the over-all rate of inflation subsided, the administration had trouble with food prices, which went up sharply in the first half of the year despite its efforts.

Last month Nixon extended price controls to raw agricultural products for the first time, but only after the first sale at the producer level. He also suspended all meat import quotas for the remainder of 1972.

How to remove the controls is a big problem for the administration. The legislation under which Nixon acted expires next April 30, but could be extended by Congress. Nixon has not yet made a decision to extend controls.

Shultz, now treasury secretary, said the President doesn't want to set a target date for ending controls because it could build up expectations and cause wages and prices to skyrocket soon after they end.

Stein said the problem is to demonstrate to the people "that the rate of inflation is low and we will keep it low... How many more months (this) will take... I don't know."

Just as uncertain is the dollar's performance overseas in foreign exchange markets.

When your partner has made a game-forcing bid, your jump to game shows that the only thing extra you have to show is a good trump holding. You are making a slam try but warning your partner that he cannot expect anything extra from you in the high card department.

North's hand is just about ideal for this jump to game and it also makes things mighty easy for South to go to the grand slam.

South knew that there might be some little play to the grand slam contract when he bid it and when dummy hit the table he gave the hand considerable study before starting on his plan of campaign.

It was obvious that he had 13 easy tricks against a 2-2 trump break and that he would have to find the best play if trumps failed to behave nicely.

Therefore, after winning the club he played his ace of spades and continued with a spade to dummy's king. East showed out and South had to play on carefully.

It appeared that he would not be able to handle a 5-1 diamond break so he decided to play out dummy's ace and king of diamonds and hope for the best.

When both opponents followed it was all over but the shouting. He ruffed a third diamond high; led a trump to dummy's jack; ruffed a fourth diamond with his last trump; cashed the top hearts to discard a club from dummy. Took the ace of clubs; ruffed his other club and made the last trick with the jack of diamonds.

Foster Parent's Goal Is Home For Elderly

By JOHN BLANKENSHIP
Bluefield Daily Telegraph

BLUEFIELD, W. Va. (AP) — An 83-year-old Bluefield man who helped raise eight foster children during the past 20 years now hopes to start an adult family care center to accommodate the elderly at his home.

Charlie J. English and his wife, Martha, maintain their nine room house "is just too big" for them. The couple, who have been married nearly 21 years, have been foster parents to five girls and three boys since 1952.

Mrs. English said she and her husband have been interviewed by the West Virginia Department of Welfare and that they will begin keeping two elderly women soon.

"A lot of elderly people need a home life," Mrs. English said. "They don't have anyone to care for them. They need to be part of a family."

Mrs. Maggie Fleshman, supervisor of the adult service unit at the department's office in Princeton, explained that the new adult family care program is designed to accommodate the "loneliness" in the "most elderly."

The family adult program enables the elderly to live in a family type setting, Mrs. English said. Explaining that "loneliness" is the "most disturbing factor" in the aged or

Sniper Gives Up Position

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A young man with a pistol climbed atop the superstructure of the Memphis-Arkansas Bridge early today and authorities said he fired on at least two persons before surrendering 3½ hours later. No one was injured.

Police identified him as Talton Lang of Olive Branch, Miss. He was taken in a police cruiser to John Gaston Hospital after taking 10 minutes to climb down a side beam of the bridge.

The incident apparently resulted from personal problems, police said.

The man will not be charged, police said, pending psychiatric tests. They did not elaborate.

A woman, identified by police as the man's wife, coaxed Lang down. Acquaintances of the man, however, said he had been divorced recently.

"You've got a lot to live for. You've got two kids at home," she told him by a bullhorn as he listened from the highest point of the bridge.

Traffic across the Mississippi River had been halted for all but about 10 minutes of the incident, creating a bottleneck since the bridge — Interstate 55 — is the only direct highway route from Memphis to Arkansas across the river.

The gunman — wearing a green shirt, white shorts and with long hair — threw his pistol in the river shortly before coming down. Prior to that, he walked the length and breadth of the bridge on its beams, occasionally yelling at the crowd to "go away."

Claims Divorce Isn't Relevant

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — University of Kansas Chancellor E. Laurence Chalmers Jr.'s recent divorce should not be a reason for the Board of Regents to consider firing him, his ex-wife says.

In a statement issued through her attorney, John Johnitz Jr., Tuesday, Mrs. Mary Ann Chalmers declared, "Anyone who attempts to make any link or correlation between the divorce and the ability of the chancellor to serve is making a tragic mistake."

Johnitz said Mrs. Chalmers regards the divorce as "purely a matter between the two of them as a private issue" and feels it "should not in any way be connected with his university position."

The regents scheduled a meeting for Saturday in Topeka after Chalmers notified them his wife was granted an emergency divorce decree last Friday in Olathe, Kan. The divorce was granted on grounds of incompatibility.

disabled person's life, the supervisor said, "they become senile when they live alone."

She added, "We have a drive on to get people interested in being adult family care providers in their homes."

Meanwhile, Mrs. English explained how she and her husband became interested in foster care.

"We had this big house and no one one to share it with. Since we had lots of room, we decided to care for homeless children."

"When you can take care of foster children—it's good to do that. You're just mother and father to them. You don't feel any different."

The couple said they once cared for seven pre-school age children at the same time. They were given one female infant when she was five days old and a male child when he was six days old.

"They were brought to us right from the hospital," Mrs. English said. "We had three babies on bottles and in diapers at one time."

The foster parents explained that in addition to caring for eight homeless children since 1952, they also housed about 20 college students during the eight years.

"Once we had six college girls plus six foster children," Mrs. English said. "There have been as many as 14 people in the house at one time. That's a full house. And each one of them had a bed of their own."

Trust Fund Word From Federal Judge

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal judge has ordered Transportation Secretary John Volpe not to stop Missouri from obligating money due the state from the highway trust fund.

Judge William H. Becker of the U.S. District Court here issued the ruling Tuesday on a complaint from the Missouri Highway Commission that Volpe has withheld authority for the commission to obligate $80 million apportioned to the state for fiscal 1973.

Volpe said the authorization was being withheld as part of the Nixon Administration's anti-inflation effort. But Judge Becker ruled such an action violated the Federal Aid Highway Act.

The highway trust fund consists of revenues from federal taxes on motor fuels and car and truck accessories.

Squadron Members Killed in Practice

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Two members of the 27th Tactical Fighter Squadron based at MacDill Air Force Base were killed during a practice bombing mission Tuesday when their F4 Phantom jet crashed on the Avon Park bombing range, the Air Force said.

The victims were identified as 2nd Lt. Richard P. Thomasie of Gretna, La., and 2nd Lt. Thomas G. Frisbee of St. Louis. Their ages were not immediately available.

A MacDill spokesman said a board of officers had been convened to investigate the accident, but the spokesman would not release further details of the crash.

Youth, Elderly Plan Protests

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Elderly Miami Beach residents and young protesters plan to join in political action during the Republican National Convention and organizers say they will put President Nixon's policies on trial in a "community court."

"The young people won't be the only demonstrators at the Republican National Convention," said 70-year-old Max Serchuk. "The senior citizens also have some gripes."

The complaints may not be the same but there seems to be a mutual feeling of alienation from the political process.

"We realized we had several things in common, that we were being generally ignored by the administration," said Pamela Cole, 23, a San Diego State College student.

The alliance blossomed during the Democratic conclave last month. Senior citizens met the Zippies, Yippies and other nondelegates in a carnival atmosphere at Flamingo Park.

Serchuk, head of the Dade County Council of Senior Citizens, said the oldsters have joined with the young people "in an investigation of the administration because we learned... in July many of these youths were aware of, and sympathetic with, the needs of senior citizens."

Four young people and four of the elderly will sit as judges when a mock trial convenes next Monday to "try" the Nixon Administration's policies, Serchuk said.

He said the investigation would hear not only the complaints of the elderly but also will listen to presentations from all the groups here — Vietnam veterans, blacks, labor representatives, Mexican-Americans, women, Indians, welfare recipients and gay activists.

"We want to hear their stories," Serchuk said. "They will be heard in a general court of the community where everyone will have a chance to state their views."

"It may be that the judges will not agree with the ideas of everyone who comes before them," he added. "They aren't there to rubber stamp everything that is put before them."

On Wednesday, when Nixon is to make his nomination acceptance speech, hundreds of old and young demonstrators will march with the verdict to the President's Miami Beach headquarters in the Doral Hotel, according to a scenario prepared by protest leaders.

Serchuk said he will be there to personally present the complaints of the senior citizens.

"I will contend that the Nixon administration turns a deaf ear to the needs of the elderly in such areas as providing adequate housing and decent nursing homes," he said. "And we need a national health security program which he is not providing."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says President Nixon plans to address the annual convention of the American Legion at Chicago, Aug. 24.

The President will stop off in Chicago while en route from Florida to the Western White House at San Clemente, Calif., aides said Tuesday.

Nixon is to spend about a week at San Clemente, then go on to Hawaii for a two-day meeting with Japan's new prime minister, Kakuei Tanaka, starting Aug. 31.

Nixon's Democratic opponent in November's general election, Sen. George McGovern, is to address the Legion convention the night of Aug. 23, the same night Nixon is to accept the GOP presidential nomination at the Republican National Convention at Miami Beach.

Proposes No-Fault Insurance

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The American Bar Association has proposed that all states provide "no-fault" automobile insurance — and that the federal government stay out.

The plan approved late Tuesday by the policy-setting House of Delegates would guarantee all injured drivers, passengers and pedestrians recovery of up to $2,000 in medical payments and lost wages without suing.

However, under a last-minute change, they would be free to sue for "pain and suffering." This provision weakened the "no-fault" proposal, although most of the accident suits that now clog the courts would become unnecessary.

The special ABA committee in charge of "no-fault" insurance had recommended that general damage suits be limited. If the injured person's medical and job losses were less than $500 he could recover only a matching amount by going to court.

The Massachusetts "no-fault" law, first in the nation, is even tougher in blocking "pain and suffering" suits. There can be none unless medical expenses exceeded $500.

Last week, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws proposed a model law that would eliminate most suits for general damages and would provide lifetime compensation for lost wages up to $200 a week as well as unlimited medical payments.

The 315-member House also approved an amendment opposing any federal law on auto insurance. "Any change which may be made in the so-called automobile accident reparations system should be by state action," according to the provision.

The Senate last week shelved a tough federal law backed by Sens. Philip Hart of Michigan and Warren Magnuson of Washington by a 49-46 vote.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Claiming his free speech was violated, former English professor H. Bruce Franklin, 37, has filed suit here in an attempt to regain his teaching job at Stanford University.

The self-described Maoist revolutionary was a tenured associate professor when the Stanford Board of Trustees voted 20-2 to fire him last January. The board acted after a lengthy campus hearing found Franklin guilty of inciting students to violent acts during antiwar demonstrations in January and February 1971.

The suit, also sponsored by the American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California, was filed in Santa Clara County Superior Court Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The trial of William O. Wooldridge, the Army's former sergeant-major, and three others accused of taking kickbacks from enlisted men's club operators has been delayed until Jan. 9.

It had been scheduled to start Tuesday but federal court officials said it was continued so attorneys will have time to collect evidence from witnesses abroad.

Wooldridge, once the Army's highest-ranking enlisted man and now retired, is accused of receiving at least $350,000 in kickbacks and raffles from club operators. Wooldridge has denied the charges.

Perjury Trial For Witness

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — A possible witness in the conviction of an Army lieutenant in the My Lai slayings in Vietnam was bound over for trial Tuesday on a perjury charge.

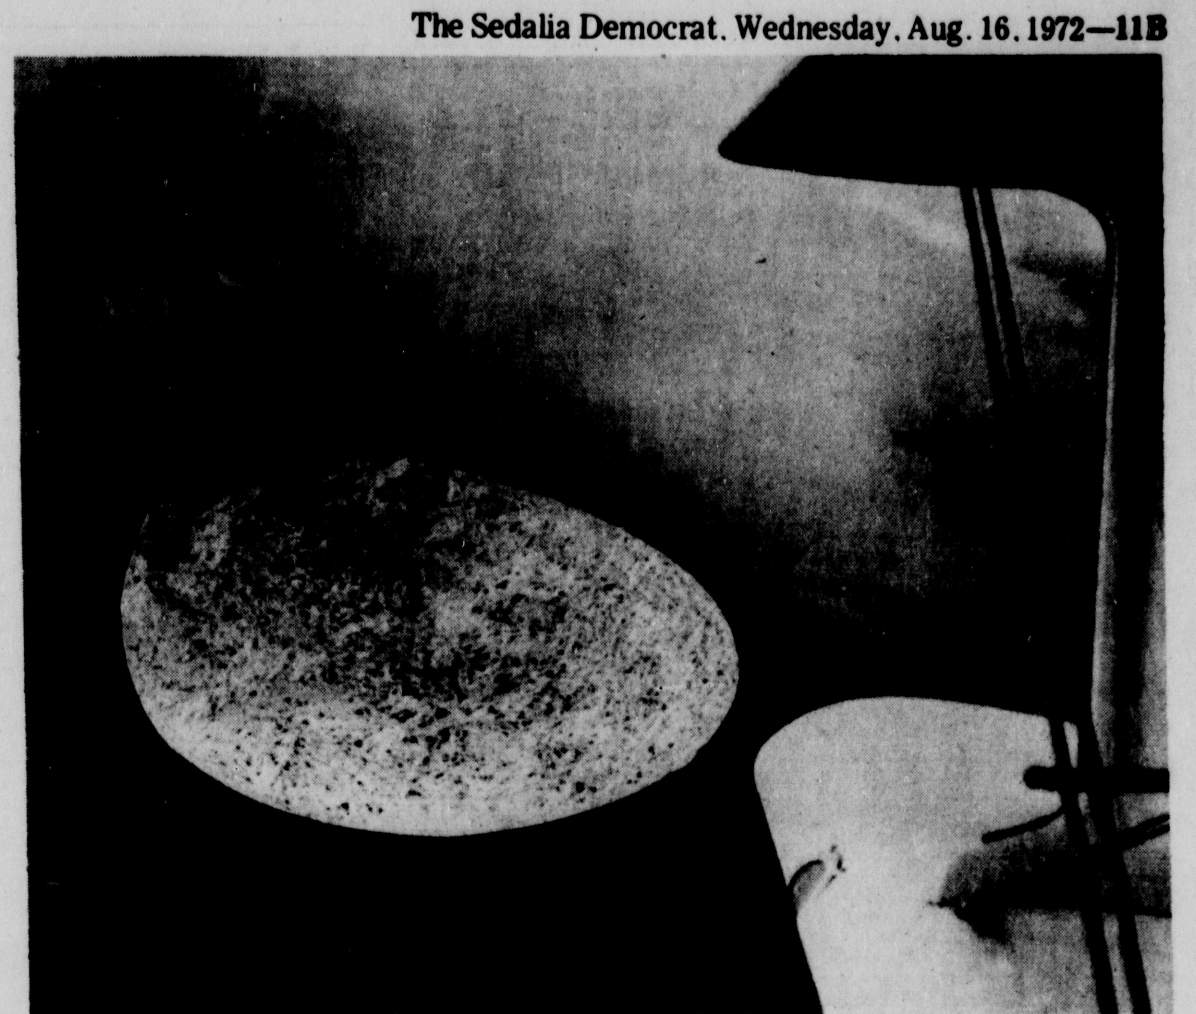

Associate District Court Judge William J. Whistler bound Charles Dean Gruver, 27, over for trial and set his arraignment for Sept. 5. He also ordered his bond reduced from $2,500 cash or $10,000 property surety to $500 cash or $5,000 property.

Gruver was a member of the same company as Lt. William Calley at the time of the My Lai massacre.

Cruver is accused of lying in a June 19 arraignment on a burglary charge when he told the court he had never been convicted of a crime. The burglary charge was subsequently dropped.

He was arrested for the April 18 burglary of a Pryor discount store in which guns, ammunition and drugs were taken. The burglary charge was dismissed for insufficient evidence at the preliminary hearing.

The perjury charge alleges Gruver was convicted of an April, 1964, larceny in Dallas under the name of Charles Dean Voke.

Actor Wins Fast Film Break

By PEACE MOFFAT

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Perry King is an actor who hasn't paid his dues.

After all, what young man, fresh out of Yale and only three months into studying drama at Juilliard, wins out over 50 other actors and gets to star opposite Shirley MacLaine in his very first film, "The Possession of Joel Delaney"?

"I wasn't looking for a role," the handsome actor says. "I was studying, and I read for this role just for the fun of it. I was trying to put into practice a few things I learned at Juilliard, but I was expecting just to enjoy myself."

"There's a lot of freedom that way," he continues. "I learned not to expect anything until it happens. With great perseverance, perhaps, I'll be able to keep that attitude. I know it works."

King's background, a doctor father and a doctor grandfather, may be an unlikely one for an actor, but from his first role in a school play when he played the part of a bird, he's been heading in that direction.

Born in Alliance, Ohio, King attended St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H., for five years, and recalls that time with something less than glee. "It wasn't St. Paul's I hated—it was just an unhappy period," he says. "It felt like a prison to me, with all the rules and regulations."

Yale was better. "I majored in drama, but there were so few courses I had to take in that field, I could just wander around and study what I wanted," he says.

Although his studies at Juilliard were interrupted, King still maintains professional training is necessary for an actor.

"There are three things an actor needs," he says, "experience, talent, a word I hate to use because it implies too much, and training. One you can get only with time. The next is either there or not. But training—that's something you can go out and get."

"The Possession of Joel Delaney," in which King has the title role, is about a young man who is possessed by the soul of a dead Puerto Rican youth. Since the film deals with spiritualism, King and the other actors attended actual seances. "I'm not a believer in that kind of thing," King says. "but I do think spiritualism can be a positive force, and there's some form of it in almost every society."

Aside from acting, King says he enjoys his family—his wife Karen and his young daughter Louise—and their life in New York. He also likes mechanics. "It's the antithesis of acting," he says. "It's all spelled out in black and white. I like engines—like taking them apart and putting them back together."

What next? King says he's interested in writing, pointing out that "actors may be people who are bored with the idea of being just one person, and writers may easily be the same way." But mostly he'd like to go on acting—either on stage or in films.

"This film was like a dream come true," he says. "It was like a childhood fantasy. But it all is true, so I'm just enjoying it. I'm trying to maintain the attitude of it doesn't matter what people think about what I do—or how good I am—just as long as I keep on enjoying it."

Campaign Of Litton Separate

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — Jerry Litton, Democratic congressional nominee from Missouri's 6th District, says he will campaign independently of the party's other candidates.

"We are going to continue to work with our own organization," he said at a reorganizational meeting of the Clay County Democratic Central Committee Tuesday night.

"We will cooperate with the county committees, of course, but the time just isn't there to dovetail our campaign with anyone else."

Litton said his campaign organization was built from scratch. "I was not supported by Gov. Hearnes and did not have any help from state officials when I began," he added.

He said he had not made up his mind yet whether to support Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic nominee for president, and noted he plans to let voters know he does not agree with McGovern's positions on such issues as amnesty for draft resisters and evaders and a guaranteed annual income.

McGovern, he said, "was not my personal choice but I intend to evaluate the senator's statements and positions before I make up my own mind. I think he has to moderate some of his positions to appeal to many voters. That's certainly true in the 6th District."

Litton, who is opposed for the congressional seat by Republican Russell Sloan, said he supports the Democrats' state ticket even though his campaign will be run without the state organization.

The county central committee elected Larry Mills of Excelsior Springs to succeed Dr. Will Adams as its chairman.

Rattan Schedules Jeff City Visit

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The deputy commander of the Army Reserve, Maj. Gen. Donald V. Rattan of Washington, D.C., was scheduled to visit Jefferson City today.

Rattan was scheduled to meet with the Missouri adjutant general concerning Missouri National Guard activities and was to tour the National Guard armory.

Oklahoma Polio Drive Scheduled

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's first statewide polio immunization drive will be kicked off Sunday, Sept. 10.

Gov. David Hall proclaimed that day "Polio Sunday" to boost the drive Tuesday.

State Health Department officials said Oklahoma has not had a reported case of polio since 1968, but one added "we've just been lucky."

Dr. R. Leroy Carpenter, Health Department director, said polio immunizations have declined, particularly among grade school children, to as low as 60 per cent. Dr. Charles Jackson, director of the department's immunization section, said one case of polio in an area where half the youngsters have not been immunized could cause a serious epidemic.

Free immunizations to be given on "Polio Sunday" will be sponsored by the state Medical Association, the state Health Department, the Oklahoma Osteopathic Association and the Kiwanis Clubs of Oklahoma.

Main target of the drive will be children from 6 weeks to 12 years old. The youngsters will be given oral vaccine on sugar cubes.

Candidate Urges No-Fault Plank

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — George Hart, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, has written a letter to Gov. Robert Docking and Democratic State Chairman Norbert Dreiling urging that a no-fault insurance plank be included in the state Democratic Party platform.

Hart said that since Congress failed to pass a federal no-fault insurance bill, the state should act.

The proposal, he said, should contain the option of settling auto damage claims under no-fault provisions or having the right to sue for recovery.

Hart also recommended the platform contain an advocacy for eliminating the state sales tax on food and medicine.

He suggested that a severance tax on gas and oil be established to make up the loss of such sales tax revenue.

Airplanes Annoying Nudists

HONOLULU (AP) — Members of a nudist colony on Oahu's idyllic north shore are taking with aplomb a unique problem: airborne voyeurs.

When a plane or helicopter dips low for a close look, "I usually stand out in the open and jump up and down and wave at them to give them something to look at," says the colony's buxom, 29-year-old caretaker, who will identify herself only as Pat.

Military spokesmen have ordered their pilots to avoid the 240-acre site of the newly opened Hawaii Nudist Club colony, with its 80 multi-colored tents. But other low fly-overs continue.

Unlike other nudist camps located in wooded areas, the Hawaii camp is in an open beach area. There are no trees to prevent aircraft from dipping low or to block an aerial view. It's also located next to a landing strip for small airplanes.

Before the area was made off-limits to military pilots, helicopters flew so low "they knocked our tents over with the wash of their rotor blades," says the operator of the colony, who prefers to be known only as Larry.

Once, he said, soldiers on maneuvers nearby plucked a few pineapples and landed in the colony area to try to give them away.

A complaint from the nudist camp led to orders for military pilots to avoid the area.

Most of the colony's 275 members are under 30, but a few elderly persons are included.

"Once we had a couple visiting out here who were in their 80's," Larry said. "I had to help the woman around. But she said at her age she couldn't afford not to try something different."
